Highly Important and Exciting Intelligence.

Miramon Re-enters the Capital---The American Consul Banished.

The English Fleet to Bombard Vera Cruz.

NEW-ORLEANS, Tuesday, April 26.

The steamer Tennessee, which arrived here to-day, brings advices from Vera Cruz to the 22d, and from the City of Mexico to the 19th of April. The news is of great interest, and indicates a very decided change in the aspect of affairs in Mexico. General MIRAMON had succeeded in forcing the lines of the Liberal Generals AMPUDIA and LLAVE, at Orizaba, and hastened forward to the capital, which city he reached on the 11th inst., with a diminished army. The victorious General had already commenced the work of slaughter, and was murdering peaceable foreigners indiscriminately. He had also issued a formal protest against the recognition of the Juarez Government. The exequatur of Mr. BLACK, the American Consul-General, had been withdrawn, and he banished from the country.

Mazatlan had been captured by PESQUIRA. The English were threatening that and the other Mexican Pacific ports, and demanding payment of claims against them.

At Vera Cruz, too, matters are approaching a crisis. The British Minister had insisted on full payments of all the claims of his countrymen and had instructed the Commander of the English fleet at Vera Cruz to demand one and a half millions of dollars from the Custom-house in that city; and, in case of refusal, to bombard the city.

JUAREZ had withdrawn the exequatur of the Spanish Consul at Vera Cruz.

FROM WASHINGTON.

Prospects of the Liberal Cause in Mexico—European Affairs—The Nicaraguan Treaties—English Claims against New-Granada, &c.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Wednesday, April 27.

Secretary CASS has received dispatches from Minister MCLANE, speaking most encouragingly of the prospects of the Liberal cause in Mexico. Señor MATA will be presented to-morrow, when Mr. BUCHANAN will deliver an address suited to the occasion of recognizing a new Government. Señor MATA effected a loan of a hundred thousand dollars in New-Orleans, and the amount has been transmitted.

Official dispatches received at the British Legation represent war in Europe as inevitable. England will avoid any participation until required to interfere to preserve the balance of power on the Continent.

I have reason to believe that England will decline a ratification of the Nicaraguan "Transit" Treaty until the "Protectorate" Treaty is also concluded.

Mr. SICKLES has been in fine condition and spirits to-day. Numerous friends called to pay their respects. Q.

[FROM THE REPORTER FOR THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

WASHINGTON, Wednesday, April 27.

A private letter from a responsible source, dated Bogota, has been received here, stating that the English holders of the bonds of the New-Granadian Government have demanded some substantial security for the payment of the interest and their ultimate redemption, and that the British Government is sustaining the demand. One of the propositions is that the power to close the franchises of the Panama Railroad shall be assigned to the bondholders.

It is not true, as has been reported, that Mr. JOHN SAVAGE is going out as Secretary to the New-Granadian Mission, if for no other reason, for the inadequacy of compensation.

Judge DOUGLAS left, this afternoon, for New-York, on private business.

It is untrue that Mr. BISHOP, of Connecticut, has been tendered the Commissionership of Patents.

Secretary COBB, who left with his family for Georgia, will be absent till the 10th of May.

An additional naval force will be sent to the Gulf after the return of the Paraguay expedition.

There is an earnest contest for the Havre Consulship, Mr. VESEY's resignation having been received; it has been offered to Mr. SIMEON JOHNSON, editor of the late Union newspaper.

The gentlemen who conducted Mr. SICKLES from the dock, yesterday, were Lieut. WILEY and Mr. J. H. BROWN, of New-York.

Assurances have been given by the President that settlers in Arizona will be fully protected from inroads of the Apache Indians.

Señor MATA will be formally presented to the President to-morrow, as Minister from Mexico.

The intelligence brought by the Tennessee of a threatened bombardment of Vera Cruz by the British fleet is not believed here, for the reason that the claims of both the English and French Governments were satisfactorily settled two months ago. As on the 6th MIRAMON was at Orizaba, which is 60 leagues from the City of Mexico, it is considered impossible that he could have reached the latter place on the 11th inst.

Southern Railroad Lines in Competition with the New-York Central Railroad.

BALTIMORE, Tuesday, April 26.

Under the influence of the Baltimore and Ohio Road, the Camden and Amboy Railroad determines the abandonment of an arbitrary rate on western business to and from New-York, and adopts a pro rata to any extent required by the southern lines. Mr. GARRETT, invited by Mr. THOMPSON, met him in Philadelphia during the two days past, and made a thorough understanding for the united action of the southern lines in competition with the New-York Central Road. The natural, geographical difference in rates, in favor of the Baltimore and Philadelphia Roads was resolved to be maintained at whatever sacrifice. A general reduction in passenger fare, between New-York and the entire West, of three dollars, is in early prospect; it is to be sustained by the two Southern Roads, without division among the western connections.

Fillibusterism in Kansas.

ST. LOUIS, Wednesday, April 27.

Advices from Leavenworth confirm previous statements of a secret movement at Pike's Peak for a descent upon Mexico. Agents of this movement are at Leavenworth and other points, urging forward the migration to the gold region, in order to have at Pike's Peak sufficient material for their purpose. The leaders base their hopes on anticipated developments in the gold country, and the probable dissatisfaction of great numbers with their prospects at the mines. The plan of the leaders is not yet fully developed, but it embraces, it is said, first a descent on Sonora, and afterwards, probably, upon Durango and Chihuahua. Ten thousand emigrants have already left different points on the Missouri for Pike's Peak.

A Bank Defaulter—Disaster.

ST. LOUIS, Tuesday, April 26.

GEORGE O. ATHERTON, teller of the Southern Bank of St. Louis, was arrested yesterday on a charge of embezzling the funds of that institution to the amount of $53,000. The bank is amply secured, for, in addition to the official bond of the teller, amounting to $20,000, property of his to the amount of $70,000 has been secured.

ATHERTON is a man of family, and was formerly bookkeeper in the Bank of Missouri, from which institution he abstracted $20,000.

The steamer Mink, with a cargo of Government stores, sunk above St. Joseph on Sunday. Loss $20,000.

Judge Shaw's "Nuisance" Opinion Set Aside.

BOSTON, Monday, April 25.

For the case of BROWN vs. PERKINSET, Ux, where a party of individuals destroyed the liquor shop of the plaintiff, at Rockport, on the plea of abating a public nuisance, Judge BIGELOW, this morning, delivered the opinion of the full Bench at Salem, setting aside the former verdict, which was based on the rulings of Judge SHAW, and ordered a new trial.

The Late News from Utah.

A MORMON VIEW OF THE CONDITION OF AFFAIRS.

ST. LOUIS, Wednesday, April 27.

Accounts from various private sources on the Mormon side, represent the condition of affairs in Utah, as materially different to what has been previously reported. It is positively denied that there is even a symptom of a hostile demonstration; that persons are subpoenaed as witnesses, and then arrested and placed in charge of the troops for safe keeping; that the Sheriff of Utah County had notified Judge CRADLEBAUGH that he was prepared to take charge of all prisoners accused of crime, saying, at the same time, that he had a secure jail, and would increase his bond to any extent that the Judge required; the Grand Jury were just prepared to make a presentment, when they were discharged, and that they had protested against the action of the Court. It is also asserted that Governor CUMMING, Secretary HARTNETT, Prosecuting Attorney WILSON, and Dr. FORNEY, are opposed to the course pursued by SINCLAIR and CRADLEBAUGH.

The Deseret News has published a memorial from the people to Governor CUMMING, attempting to prove the illegality of Judge CRADLEBAUGH holding Court at Provo. It also severely criticises the Judge's course, and accuses him of setting himself up against the civil authorities of the Territory in employing the troops to execute the orders of the Court without a valid reason, thus showing clearly a total disregard of the latest expressed policy of the Administration concerning Utah. It also charges him with a settled purpose to force a collision between the people of the Territory and the troops.

The Mormons seem to regard President BUCHANAN's proclamation as exempting parties from arrest for all past offences.

Further Particulars of the Steamboat Catastrophe.

LOUISVILLE, Wednesday, April 27.

FROM CALIFORNIA.

A Tight Steamer-Day—Scarcity of Money—A Hotel Burned—Ill-Natured Talk about Insurance Companies—Imports of Young Men from New-York—No Work to be Had—The Mount Vernon Humbug—Captain Pendleton's Trial—Miscellaneous News.

From Our Own Correspondent.

SAN FRANCISCO, Tuesday, April 5, 1859.

If this is not what might be called a "tight steamer," then there is no reliance to be placed on the word of the young gentlemen who were rushing about town all day yesterday, with their hands and pockets full of bills. When I say a "tight steamer," I do not refer to the capability of a steamer to keep out water, for there is very few of them hereabouts that will, but I use the term in a California sense. A "tight steamer," or tight "steamer-day," is understood to be the day previous to the sailing of the steamer for the East, when all bills are due, and everybody expects to pay everybody what they owe them; and it is "a tight steamer-day" when money cannot be collected, borrowed or raised in any way or shape, and such has been the case this time. The reason being that remittances are backward in coming forward. The miners have not got fairly at work yet; it is too cold, the snow is yet deep in the mountain gulches, and nobody blames them for not wanting to stand up to their hips in ice-water, and wash out gold just to please the people in San Francisco, and make times easier for them. It has been a cold, raw Winter for California; decidedly a disagreeable one, and, per consequence, the Spring is very backward. Everything is behind hand, the grass and crops, the strawberries, "garden sass," and all manner of green things, require warm sunshine to bring them forward. For two weeks past, even New-York winds and dust could hardly equal what we have had here. It has been raw, cold and windy, and, as I said before, almost as bad as New-York before the sprinkling process lays the dust. If it was not for our cold, strong winds and dust during the Summer, San Francisco would be one of the most delightful places to live in, instead of being as it is, in the minds of many people, the most disagreeable.

Nothing new the last fortnight. There's been no earthquakes, no big rows or fights; no Sickles affairs, no nothing in the way of genteel topics, except the burning of the large and magnificent hotel at Napa Springs, owned by Messrs. TAFT and BREWSTER. Napa Sulphur Springs, our Saratoga, where all the fashionables resort during the Summer months, is located in a most romantic and delightful mountain gorge, at the upper end of the valley some seventeen miles from the village of Napa, which is by no means a dull or sleepy place. There's no location with so much to attract and such natural beauties as the spot upon which the hotel was located in all the Eastern States, and all the rides and drives in the vicinity are delightful. The hotel I speak of was built three years ago, and furnished in magnificent style. There's probably no hotel at any watering-place in the United States more conveniently or comfortably arranged, more elegantly furnished, than was the "Sulphur Springs Hotel." It cost some $80,000 to $100,000, and had just been refitted, painted, and prepared for the season now approaching, when we were all shocked a few days since by the telegraphic news on the Bulletin board that it had been entirely consumed the previous evening. There has been mourning and wailings, and groans of despair among our ladies "in society" ever since. They cannot, will not be comforted—for what is to be done with all the new and elegant Summer wardrobes—where can those fleecy, gauzy, substanceless fabrics be displayed? Now, "What shall we do?" is the exclamation on all sides. You must know that "a Summer dress" is about as useful an affair in the City of San Francisco as a buffalo robe to the Feejee Islanders—in the one place it's too cool, in the latter too warm; our mornings would do, but by 12 o'clock thin dresses are at a discount. In Sacramento it will do better, and I don't see any other way for the ladies who had made such preparations for Napa Springs, but to get themselves invited up to Sacramento, and spread themselves in that hot and dusty locale. The burning of the hotel is a public calamity, and all sympatnize with the lady community. It would have been a very gay season, many families having broken up housekeeping with a view to spending the Summer at the Springs, and nearly every room was engaged. There was an insurance of fifty thousand dollars on the building, and so great is the competition among the Insurance Agencies here, that they are vieing with each other who shall pay first, and have sent messages to Messrs. TAFT & BREWSTER, to call and get their money—they were crazy to pay it. I mentally exclaim "can such things be?" They overcome me like a Summer cloud, after the experience I have had with Insurance offices—the long and severe squabbles, the well-contested fights; and when I at last overcome them, to get for my pay my own note that I had given to effect the insurance; but these were salt-water insurance offices, and there is, evidently, a difference. The salt has made them tough, pickled them, and they are like old turtles, with very thick shells, whenever you come at them they are found invulnerable; and, when you hammer on their shells hard, they send forth a keen, Wall-street lawyer, paid by the year, to fight your claim, and he asks you what the devil you are making such a clatter about? Within, you hear a smothered voice exclaiming, "stu-boy, sic-him, go at him Bose." Many a time, as I have been riding up from Wall-street ferry of an evening, I have looked through the unbarred windows of the Insurance offices, the gas throwing a faint light on the fore ground of desks, while in the rear the mysterious private "sanctum" of the great man who signs checks is dimly visible, and reflected upon the well fought battles and struggles there for the Almighty Dollar. Talk about your naval victories, there are no salt water tussels on record that can begin with the oft and hard-fought battles between the unfortunate wretch who has "a claim," and the officials who look at a fellow when he presents it with such a withering glance, as much as to say, "How dare you lose your vessel, Sir, and then have the impudence to come here and ask to be paid for her? Wretched man! We will forgive you this time on condition that you never appear here again."

Once upon a time a green friend from the country, riding by with me, inquired why there were no shutters or bars to the windows of the Insurance offices, as they must have large amounts of money and valuable papers to excite the cupidity of thieves. I put my head in the sleeves of the last fashion Raglan overcoat and "laughed." "My dear fellow," said I, "when you come to know those tough institutions as well as I do, and as well as the public do, you will understand it all perfectly. Their character is too well known, and there's not a thief, the most skillful, from the North to the South pole, that wouldn't sooner undertake to steal the 'scent from a flower garden,' than to attempt getting anything out of a Marine Insurance office, by fair means or by foul. Ain't that so, Jones?"

There's something new under the sun, and we are all going to have plenty of money, that is everybody in California, those that won't come here don't deserve any from this source. Mr. B. B. THAYER, chemist, has recently astonished himself and everybody else here who has seen or heard anything of it, by the large amount of gold he has been able by a new process, or rather by a new combination of chemicals, to obtain from quartz rocks, tailings, &c., that had heretofore yielded but a small profit. He took out 30 grains of gold from a small piece of quartz that had paid only $30 to the ton, and has tried and tested thoroughly his process on fifty different kinds of rock and tailings, and the best of it is the small expense; for $2 he can furnish material sufficient to work a ton of rock. People are taking all kinds of quartz, "tailings," washings, &c., to him daily, and he has triumphed in every instance. It is not publicly announced yet, but if Mr. THAYER's process turns out what it now seems to be without doubt, (and no man can gainsay it thus far,) it will create a revolution in mining in California, and we shall get gold by tons. Mr. THAYER has been offered $10,000 for an eighth interest in it, which he of course declines, as it, if fully successful, will be worth millions—and you won't have any cause to complain of our being so unremitting in our attentions. (Stolen from Ben Card.)

I perceive that by every steamer we have an influx of nice young men from New-York and thereabouts, who land in most stunning clothes, of most wonderful fashion and fearful pattern. Such an immensity of sleeve, and the shoulders bolstered "outboard," from starboard to larboard, like studdingsail-booms of a ship, the body having gone considerably to waist. A few days of our wind and dust take the newness from them, and they look wilty and limpy, especially after a damp, misty fog. These young men come out here with letters and recommendations, looking for employment. They are doubtless competent, for a man's wearing a fashionable coat does not render him an object of contempt, or unfit him for business, malgré the old-fogy school of belief, but they come to a poor place for occupation. There is no employment for them. Clerks, book-keepers, men of good character and ability, are unemployed, and cannot find work to do; and a situation is as difficult to procure as in New-York. There are hundreds of applicants to one vacancy. California is no longer a place where young men brought up in stores and counting-rooms have but to come to find permanent employment, at high rates. The country is full of people seeking it, and on all sides are found men able and willing to turn their hand to anything that is respectable and honorable, for a living; but, as I before remarked, there is nothing for them to do. The country is overstocked, and there is no kind of a chance for them. To those who are making a living in the East, I would say: Stay there, and don't fancy you have but to land in California to realize all your golden dreams of good situations and high wages. There are hundreds working for their board, and glad enough to get it. California is able to support ten times its present population, provided they are laboring, hard-fisted, hard-working men. It's the country for farmers—I mean those who have means sufficient to purchase a few hundred acres of land, and go to work at it. The mines afford a remunerative field also, and California is still open to all, and will provide for all who will work and know how to work. There are plenty who are willing, but don't know how, and such men are a nuisance to themselves, and a burden to their friends. Anything but a clever fellow who is eternally unfortunate—one of those chaps who work so hard, but never succeed. I wonder what such men are intended for, in this world!

In Sacramento they had a stabbing affair the other day—all about a small matter. It appears the Judges of the Supreme Court considered their dignity touched and felt offended because Governor WELLER choose to appoint a personal friend of his as "Reporter" of decisions, a position with scarcely $1,600 a year, without consulting them. So they gave orders to Mr. FAIRFAX, Clerk of the Court, not to allow Mr. LEE, the Reporter, to have access to the records of the Court. Whereupon a disagreement ensued between those two gentlemen, which resulted in Mr. FAIRFAX calling LEE a liar and slapping his face, whereupon Mr. LEE pinked Mr. FAIRFAX with a sword cane, and wounded him badly, but he will recover. Both gentlemen are men of high standing, and each has his constituents who back him up. FAIRFAX, after being stabbed, drew a pistol and held it at LEE's breast, with his finger on the trigger, but, with great gallantry and consideration, remarked, "I ought to kill you, Sir, but I spare you for the sake of your family." It was a noble and magnanimous act, and about the best thing I have heard of, as coming from one of the "chivalry," for some time. If more of these "first families" (the hundred pound tobacco lot) were like FAIRFAX, everybody north or south of "Mason and Dixon" would be glad.

The people of Oakland chartered a steamboat and sent it to Sacramento to bring down the collective wisdom, the whole body Legislative, to have them see what a nice place Oakland was to move the capital to. They all came down, of course, when it was understood they were to be eaten, drank and slept at the Oaklanders' expense. There was a grand time of it, and for two days they were feasted, toasted and drankuated, until there were probably not ten men in the party capable of remembering what they came down for, and didn't know Oakland from San Francisco, and so they were taken back again, and landed on the levee at Sacramento early in the morning, with very confused ideas of where they had been, what they went for, and who they had seen. The Oaklanders have strong hopes of the success of their struggles to move the capital to their shady groves. It would be a capital operation, but can't be "did" this year; may be brought about next season, perhaps. Oakland is the Brooklyn of San Francisco and a delightful place.

The Mount Vernon fever "is workin" and every parlor contains a very nicely ruled book with a place for the name, and a very wide column for dollars and cents, and you are "boned" on sight for your contribution to this "great and glorious object." Fudge! A great and glorious humbug, if EVERETT does write for BONNER. I know BONNER, that is, I have a sort of an acquaintance with him; I have trotted horses with him on the road, took a little "shy" at him one day, and got beaten for my pains. He drove a wretched looking, spike-tailed horse, but old Spike took the conceit out of me. My recollection of the man induces me to think he knows when he has a good thing—he probably knew Spiketail's abilities and now in this Mount Vernon matter he's got a Spiketail there. On all sides we hear of nothing but Mount Vernon; the ladies, dear creatures, go into ecstasies over it, and waylay and rush upon unsuspecting men, book and pencil in hand, with an impudence and audacity under cover of the "benevolent object" that, if extended towards themselves, would endanger every man's life, and he would not know at what moment he might expect to be "Sickled."

There's decency and propriety in all things, generally, but it's precious scarce in the Mount Vernon matter. The idea of feathering Mr. WASHINGTON's nest, as they are doing, by enabling him to make about the best real estate speculation anybody has heard of so far, is ridiculous. The whole thing isn't worth over $30,000, and everybody knows that; but "go in," dear creatures, and extort money from every man you meet. There are plenty of people who are afraid to express their minds, and had rather pay than be thought so "barbarous" as to refuse to subscribe to the "great object." I know I shall horrify some people, I hope I shall; it's very refreshing to do so occasionally. I have done it a great many times and enjoyed it. I know I shall shock the whole length of the New-Haven Railroad; there are lots of people living along its borders who get dreadfully shocked oftentimes at the dreadful things that their neighbors do—but I'll stick to it, I have said it and I do say it—"Mount Vernon" is a humbug. I hoist the standard of rank heresy and rebellion—three cheers and a tiger for it, come now, what do ye say? If Mr. WASHINGTON did make money by raising cane(s) its no reason why the feminine community should.

Everybody hereabouts is much gratified and delighted to know that the former talented "lady correspondent" of the Alta has resumed her pennings again, and is hereafter to be New-York correspondent of the San Francisco Daily Times. It has gained the paper many subscribers, and we all welcome her spicy letters. As a correspondent she is unrivaled, and since her reappearance in the list, we poor scribblers, this way, are seeking for a knot-hole that we can charter to crawl through and hide our diminished heads. Long may she continue to delight her numerous friends in this quarter of the world.

By the papers you will perceive that the case of Capt. PENDLETON, of the bark Sarah Park, for inhuman treatment of his crew, and alleged murder of one of them, is creating considerable excitement. The evidence on his examination goes to prove a series of barbarities and inhuman treatment of men never equaled in all the highly-colored accounts of Slavery; and Uncle Tom's Cabin must have been a most delightful abode in comparison with the details of the atrocious and fiend-like treatment human beings experienced on the voyage of the Sarah Parker. The evidence is overwhelming. It is proved that he beat and lashed his men, cutting their backs and gashing them with the whip, and then throwing salt pork brine upon their wounds to heighten their sufferings. He amused himself by knocking down WILLIAMS, the man that died subsequently, throwing him across decks then jumping upon him with thick boots, and a series of cruelties unheard-of among civilized people. The Court-room has been crowded daily while the examination was going on, and to such a pitch has the feeling against Capt. PENDLETON risen that an infuriated crowd of five hundred people were ready to take the law into their own hands, and had not the Marshal shown great firmness and been assisted by a posse of forty or fifty citizens, armed with revolvers Capt. P. would have been sacrificed to the fury of the people. I hope all the "Shriekers" will read the evidence, and that the Independent will publish the testimony, and if, after so doing, any respectable man can be found to say he has ever read of anything to equal it in the annals of Slavery, he can call at MEALIO's for a new hat at my expense.

The papers will give you full accounts of the explosion of the Contra Costa ferry-boat, and circumstances attending it. It was a sad affair.

I see by the New York papers that on the strength of the great candle speculation here candles have advanced considerably. No doubt the speculators on your side will suffer equally with those here. Their time was short, and short sixes went down and got to be "sixes and sevens." A little subsequent light on their calculations proved that the quantity was beyond their means to control, and their wicked attempts to darken the market proved that they stood in their own light. Their losses are heavy, though they do make light of them, and the last little illumination on the subject will prevent any further attempts to "dip" in after the same fashion again. No doubt thousands of boxes were shipped from your market on the strength of the speculation here. Parties here are seriously contemplating shipping the stock back to New-York. Thus do little dogs run around after their own tails.

THE THIRD ANNUAL MEETING.

First Day's Proceedings.

The Quarantine and Sanitary Convention commenced its third annual meeting yesterday morning, at the building of the College of Physicians and Surgeons, corner of Twenty-third-street and Third-avenue. A temporary organization was effected by calling Dr. WM. H. KEMP, of Baltimore, to act as Chairman, and Ex-Councilman CHARLES H. HASWELL, of this City, as Clerk. The roll of Delegates showed that the new Association had taken a deep hold on the affections of thinking people; 142 answering to their names. From New-York City, 25 Delegates appeared representing the New-York Sanitary Association—17 the Academy of Medicine, 3 the Medical Association, 3 the Kappa Lampda, 5 the Ward's Island Hospital, 11 the New-York Common Council. From Brooklyn, 3 represented the Medico-Chirurgical Society, 2 the Kings County Medical Society, 6 the City Hospital, and 2 the Board of Health; (the invitation to Brooklyn had been blundered, so that none appeared for the Common Council.) From Pennsylvania, 11 presented certificates from the Philadelphia Board of Health, 1 from the Philadelphia County Medical Society, and 5 from the College of Physicians. From Rhode Island, 2 from the Providence Board of Health. From Massachusetts, 15 from the Boston Board of Health. From Virginia, 4 from the Norfolk Board of Health. From Maryland there were 12 of the Baltimore Common Council, 4 of its Board of Health, and 6 from its city Medical Societies. From New-Jersey were 6 of the Newark Board of Health, 1 from the Newark Medical Society, and 2 from the Essex County Medical Society. From Alabama, 1; from the District of Columbia, 1; from Troy, (N. Y.,) 2; from Staten Island, 3.

From such a mixture of medical and lay men, all interested in sanitary matters, it was natural to expect that the deliberations would not lack the flavor of experience—that the time spent in convention would not be wasted. And substantially this was the sentiment that Dr. JOSEPH M. SMITH expressed when, representing the College in which the sessions are held, he welcomed them to the City.

There was some curiosity to know why the Cooper Institute was not taken for the meetings, seeing that it had been originally intended to go there. The reasons came out when Gen. MATHER moved to have a Committee look the question up. Dr. MCNULTY explained that the large rooms of the Cooper Institute were too large, and (in a quiet voice) that the small rooms were not well ventilated. Mr. COOPER assured them, meanwhile, that if they should need any of the rooms of this Institute, now or hereafter, they were at their service.

The following gentlemen present, and not delegates, were invited to act as such: Prof. JEROME, (new Marine Hospital physician;) Dr. COOPER, of Troy; the Hon. Dr. TRIMBLE, of New-Jersey; Dr. JEDEDIAH MILLER, of New-York, and Dr. FRANK. TURNBULL, of Brooklyn.

A letter from Mayor POWELL inviting the Company to unite in the Brooklyn Water Celebration to-day, was a temptation. Dr. BOYD, (Health officer,) assuring them of carriages and distinguished considerations at their service, but as it could not be attended to in a body without spoiling the meeting, it was left for such as prefer to see Brooklyn rather than listen to the discussions to accept the invitation quietly and individually.

The gallant Gen. PROSPER M. WETMORE, of New-York, was Chairman of the Committee, consisting of one from each State represented, to nominate permanent officers. After an absence of half an hour, the General reported the following list which was unanimously elected:

President—John H. Griscom, M. D., of New-York.

Vice-Presidents—Frederick W. Lincoln, Jr., Mayor of Boston; Edwin M. Snow, M. D., of Rhode Island; Joseph M. Smith, M. D., of New-York; Isaac A. Nichols, M. D., of New-Jersey; W. R. Laroche, M. D., of Maryland; James F. Wilson, M. D., of Delaware; Jacob W. Hough, M. D., of Maryland; Conway Whittle, of Virginia; Professor John Darvey, of Alabama; Francis Mohun, of the District of Columbia; Charles G. Cornell, of New-York; William A. Piper, M. D., of Pennsylvania.

Secretaries—C. H. Hazewell, of New-York; A. M. Bell, of Brooklyn, N. Y.; H. St. Clair Ash, M. D., of Pennsylvania; Eli D. Hinkle, M. D., of Maryland; Gabriel Grant, M. D., of New-Jersey; Henry G. Clark, M. D., of Massachusetts.

Dr. KEMP, in resigning his post, made a neat little speech, to which Dr. GRISCOM very happily replied. Though evidently surprised at their choice, being tapped by the emergency, he ran sanitary statistics, of course, since he is always gushing with them. The objects of the Convention, he said, were two-fold—to consider the external sanitary police of cities whose operation was coextensive with commerce, and the internal hygienic police of society. The first was the most imposing, but the last he thought far the most important. Quarantine defences had engaged the attention of all commercial nations from time immemorial, but the hygienic rules for the preservation of the health of individuals and of families had been strangely neglected. Yet the house on the heath and the tenement in the City needed to know them alike, and ignorance of them was limiting the duration of human life far more narrowly than nature had set. New-York City in twenty-five years had lost

	Inhabitants.
From cholera	12,300
From cholera infantum	15,000
In twenty years, from hydrocephalus	12,400
From erysipelas	2,100
From cholera morbus	1,400
From convulsions (mostly infantile)	20,000

These were diseases originating in the domiciles. But from yellow fever, against which, more than anything else, we erect the barriers of Quarantine, the loss in 50 years had been only 600. These pregnant facts produced quite a sensation.

The following gentlemen were appointed a Committee to arrange and propose the business of the sessions:

Drs. Harris, New-York; Jeffries, Boston; Kemp, Maryland; Darby, Alabama; Nichols, New-Jersey; Force, District Columbia; Maberry, Pennsylvania; Snow, Rhode Island; Wilson, Delaware; Boyd, Brooklyn; Councilman Ottarson, New-York; Alderman Parkhurst, Newark; Councilman G. A. Henderson, Baltimore; Mayor Lincoln, Boston; H. C. Lovett, Norfolk; ex-Mayor C. V. Clickener, Hoboken; Mayor Rodman, Providence, R. I.; and Mayor Gregory of Jersey City.

The reports from the two Committees appointed at the meeting in Baltimore, were made the special order for this morning, immediately after reading the journal. An adjournment was then taken for the day, the great body of the delegates submitting themselves to the lead of PETER COOPER, Dr. A. H. STEVENS and Dr. MCNULTY, who took them out to see the lions of the vicinity, the Cooper Institute, the Astor Library, the Historical Society's Rooms, and the Demilt Dispensary.

The reports alluded to above as the special order for this morning are very elaborate, and really valuable productions. The one on Quarantine is a document of eighty-four pages. First it details the history of Quarantine from the earliest times. Second, it discusses the question, "Have Quarantines secured the object for which they were originally intended?" and gives the reasons why, to some extent, they have not. Third, it considers what reforms are necessary to make them more efficient and less burdensome. To the report upon these topics all the members of the Committee sign their names, to wit: Drs. WILSON JEWELL, of Philadelphia; JOHN M. MORIARTY, of Boston; WARREN CLEVELAND, of Brooklyn; WM. J. WRAGG, of Charleston; WM. SELDEN, of Norfolk; B. LAROCHE and D. F. CONDIE, of Philadelphia, and WM. M. KEMP, of Baltimore. A fourth part, for which Dr. WRAGG alone is responsible, discusses the feasibility of a uniform system of quarantine laws. The fifth part to treat of the best means for purifying infected vessels was intrusted to Dr. CLEVELAND, and is not yet forthcoming. This elaborate report is likely to elicit a good deal of wholesome debate.

But the report of the Committee on the Internal Hygiene of Cities is a still more extensive and carefully prepared document of 190 pages. The subject referred to them being susceptible of division, it was divided, and farmed out in parts to the distinguished gentlemen composing the Committee. As the result, we have

1. A very valuable essay upon disinfectants; in which Dr. W. C. VAN BIBBER, of Baltimore, modestly distrusting himself, has presented answers to a circular upon the subject, from Dr. SHERIDAN MUSPRATT, of Edinburgh; Dr. CAMPBELL MORFIT, of New-York, and Dr. A. TARDIEU, of Paris—which, jointly, compose a body of information upon this important but little-investigated subject of the highest value.

2. A brief essay on the importance of an ample supply of water, an adequate sewerage and the proper disposal of offal, by Dr. JOHN H. GRISCOM.

3. A full discussion of the importance and economy of sanitary measures to cities, by Dr. JOHN BELL, of Philadelphia.

4. A draft of a sanitary code for cities—by Dr. HENRY G. CLARK, of Boston—than which probably no so brief code could be a better one for cities generally. It is hardly wide enough or minute enough to answer the purpose of New-York, in its present exceedingly filthy state, though when once more set to rights, and on a decent footing, it would put even our City under good sanitary regulations.

If the debates upon these topics prove as able as the texts, the Convention will be one of exceeding interest, and its deliberations cannot but be serviceable in the highest degree.

Proceedings of the Hearthstone Club.

At the last meeting of the Hearthstone Club at the Cooper Institute Mrs. JOHNSON occupied the Chair, and Mrs. FARNHAM was chosen Secretary pro tem. A large number of new members proposed at the previous meeting were elected, and additional members were proposed.

The Secretary read several papers upon new and useful household utensils. One upon carpet-sweepers by Mrs. H. C. INGERSOLL, of Bangor, Me.; also a romantic article upon sewing-machines. It elicited considerable discussion upon the comparative merits of these instruments. An article upon cooking by gas excited much interest. Also one upon a new washing machine. Several other papers were read, one upon "Manners," another upon "A College of Domestic Economy."

Mrs. E. F. ELLET stated that housekeepers were complaining now more than ever of the difficulty of procuring good servants. A lady told her that a servant had said the servants thought of requiring references from their mistresses as to their character. There is an association in London which takes the names of servants, inquires into their character, and recommends such only as stand the test of examination. She suggested that something similar be instituted by this Club. There are also a great many women who are obliged to support themselves, and who envy the Irish their opportunities for domestic service. She thought that through such an association privileges could be secured to them which would render such service more agreeable, and at the same time secure the ladies more intelligent servants.

The President thought it right that servants should be assured of the character of the houses to which they were recommended. She had known of girls being sent from intelligence offices to improper places, where they were subjected to great temptations. Even if they left such a place as soon as they discovered its character, they incurred suspicion from not being able to refer to their last place.

Mr. PETER COOPER related a case in point: A handsome young girl had been sent from an intelligence office into a family of great pretension, the mistress of which professed a high degree of saintliness. This girl's sister was a servant in a family closely related to the first family. Having heard nothing from her sister for some time, inquiry was instituted and the house visited. The mistress declared that the girl was not there. The services of an officer were secured, but before the search was commenced the girl made her appearance. She stated that she had been locked up, and that a man had tried to persuade her to go to Brooklyn and live with him; but she had resolutely refused, and finally managed to steal from the house and escape. Mr. COOPER thought it very important that knowledge should be obtained of parties to whom girls were committed. He was convinced that hundreds of girls were ruined by being sent from intelligence offices to improper places, and he hoped that this Club would establish an institution which would secure both the employer and the employed.

Mrs. FARNHAM said that this was especially necessary for the protection of foreign women. They were victimized to an almost incredible extent. Their ignorance is astounding. While an officer of the Woman's Protective Emigrant Society, she had the greatest difficulty in persuading them that the Society had no design upon them. One of them, after consenting to go out West, came back crying and said, "Mam, Mrs. —— said that you were going to take us out there and sell us into Slavery, and I don't believe you'd do so much for us unless you'd some good for yourself at the bottom of it."

Captain HABEY said that it had come to his knowledge as a Police officer, that there are men and women in this City who make it their business to select girls for ruin from intelligence offices.

Mrs. ALLEN, Mrs. SEMPLE and Mrs. WILBOUR were added to the Investigating Committee. The President expressed a hope that they would take every possible opportunity of examining labor-saving machines and give the Club the benefit of their investigations. The Club then adjourned; its next meeting to be held in three or four weeks, will be duly advertised.

Death of Bishop Doane.

The Right Rev. GEORGE WASHINGTON DOANE Protestant Episcopal Bishop of New-Jersey, died at his residence in Burlington, yesterday, aged sixty years. Bishop DOANE, the son of JONATHAN DOANE, an industrious carpenter of Trenton, was born in 1799, received his education at Union College, whence he graduated at the age of 19, and immediately commenced the study of Theology. He was ordained as deacon of the Episcopal Church, by Bishop HOBART, in 1821, and was elevated to the priesthood two years afterwards. For two or three years he officiated as assistant minister of Trinity Church, in this City, and was subsequently elected to the Chair of Belles Lettres and Oratory in Washington College, Connecticut. Resigning his Professorship in 1828, he was chosen Rector of Trinity Church, Boston, and held the position until the year 1832, when he was elected Bishop of the Diocese of New-Jersey, holding that office until his death. During his rectorship of the Boston parish, he contracted a marriage with the widow of a brother of Colonel PERKINS, the well-known millionaire. The lady, whose fortune was large, unhappily became insane several years since, and until her death was the inmate of an asylum in Massachusetts. From this union several sons resulted; one of whom recently embraced the doctrines of the Church of Rome. The Bishop's residence has been for many years at Burlington, where he founded St. Mary's Hall, an institution for the instruction of young ladies, and Burlington College: the former in 1827, and the latter in 1846. In the effort to establish these institutions upon a firm basis, he expended large sums, for a great portion of which he was indebted to the liberality of his wealthy parishioners. Pecuniary embarrassments, however, overtook him during the prosecution of his enterprises, and no inconsiderable degree of ill-feeling was excited in consequence of the delays and troubles incident to the Bishop's self-imposed task. The City of Burlington, nevertheless, has reason for gratitude to the Bishop for the essential service rendered it by the establishment of his educational institutions.

Bishop DOANE enjoyed a high literary reputation. A poet of more than ordinary ability, a keen controversialist, an eloquent and original pulpit orator, and a ready writer on theological topics, his pen was in active service. A volume of poems was published by him in 1842, under the title of Songs by the Way. The affairs of the Diocese had engrossed his attention during the later years of his life.

The Oberlin Rescue Cases—Help Proffered.

The citizens of Oberlin, Ohio, held a public meeting on Saturday evening, April 23, to express sympathy with their fellow-townsmen in confinement at Cleveland. The Rev. Dr. MORGAN presided, and addressed the meeting, and was followed by Professor MONROE, the Rev. H. Fairchild, Mr J. M. LANGSTON and others. Professor MONROE made a striking speech, and put the facts of the pending case in short compass. He said:

"1. We are engaged in an obstinate and bitter war with the whole force of the Federal Government—a war not of our own seeking, but, nevertheless, an obstinate and bitter contest, unless we retreat. 2. This town is the point of attack. We must take the brunt, bear the expense, suffer in our persons, and in the persons of our friends. 3. Though new to us, this war has been brewing and preparing in the minds of the allies of Slavery for several years. Their policy has been, first, to render us powerless by corrupting the statutes of the State, and then bring us to an issue."

The resolutions adopted at this meeting denounced the Fugitive Slave law, extolled the State of Wisconsin for her opposition to that enactment, and wound up with the following definite statement:

6. Resolved, That we send our word of greeting and of cheer to our fellow citizens held by the United States authorities at Cleveland, and assure them that their cause is our cause, and that, while they stand manfully in the breach, we will sustain them with our sympathies and prayers, and with our help when the occasion calls.

The argument before the Supreme Court of Ohio on the application for a writ of habeas corpus, in behalf of the imprisoned rescuers, took place on Monday. The decision of the Court is not yet announced.

THE PARAGUAY ADJUSTMENT.—The intimations given by the Washington correspondent of certain New-York journals, that the treaties entered into by Commissioner BOWLIN have arrived at the Department of State, are not correct. The Commissioner himself will be the bearer of them; and he is not expected to arrive before the beginning of May.—Constitution, April 26.

BARTON & STOCKER review thus: "An advance in the rates of freight has materially checked the demand for common Resin, and temporary dullness is the consequence, although a fair business was done in the earlier part of the week, at prices differing but little from those last quoted. The transactions in the medium and fine grades have been principally confined to the home trade, but little anxiety to buy at present rates appearing on the part of shippers. A correspondence has passed between Ex-Governor Fletcher, of Vermont, and Dr. Edward Hitchcock, in reference to the latter's orthodoxy. Mr. Fletcher wrote to inquire whether Dr. Hitchcock had ever asserted the incompatibility of the science of geology with the Mosaic account of the Creation. The distinguished geologist replies that he believes in the inspiration of the Book of Genesis, refers to his Religion of Geology, and suggests that the heterodoxy imputed to him recently in a Vermont paper, to which Mr. Fletcher alludes, may have been uttered by his namesake, the Rev. Roswell D. Hitchcock, of the Union Theological Seminary in this City.

DINSMORE'S
RELIABLE RAILROAD GUIDE,
What makes travelers ask for it?
The great features wherein our Guide excels all others, is in the uniform correctness of the Time Tables, and SPLENDID RAILROAD MAP.

We append an extract of a letter we have had for some time; our extreme modesty has kept it from the public thus long, but as it seems to be fashionable to "blow your own horn" here it is.
* * * "I have traveled over all the principal roads in every State of the Union within the past eight years and never have been one day without 'DINSMORE'S GUIDE,' and would not be, even if they were one dollar each. I have found it almost always correct. It has often been a wonder to me how they can keep it so."—Railroad Traveler.

MUSICAL.

THE BRIGGS' PATENT PIANO-FORTE,
OR THE VIOLIN PIANO.
It is built upon an iron frame, or bed plate, entirely separate from the case, thus relieving the sound-board and every other part of the instrument from the strain.
It will remain in tune for many months, and when the strings are settled even for years.
It has convex sounding-boards above and below, like the Violin, which are connected together in the same manner, thus making the entire instrument a vibrating shell.
It has greater depth and fullness of tone, and its capacity, or power of sustaining the tone, has never been equaled, except by instruments of the violin class.
It improves with age and use, becoming more vibratory, and the tone purer and more sonorous.
It is the best piano-forte existing, and is recommended by Gottschalk, Thalberg, and many other celebrated artists and professors. Sole agents,

INDIA RUBBER GOODS.

CAUTION TO DEALERS IN ELASTIC FABRICS CONTAINING THREADS OR SHEETS OF VULCANIZED RUBBER.—The undersigned gives notice that he holds an absolute conveyance from Charles Goodyear of the exclusive right to use vulcanized rubber prepared according to said Goodyear's patent of June 15, 1844, in all elastic fabrics the elasticity of which is due to the shirring or corrugating the sheets or threads of such fabrics, and in all woven, braided, cemented or sewed fabrics, or such as are or can be covered or protected on one or both sides with substances other than rubber, and in all smooth, elastic shirred goods; and also to make and sell India-rubber threads of vulcanized rubber, and all threads or sheets of rubber which are or can be made or finished by union with or to be covered by fibrous substances, and he hereby gives notice that he is ready to supply the trade with all such fabrics at reasonable rates, and has a full stock now in store.

His attention has been called to an advertisement signed by William Judson, in which said Judson claims to be the owner of the right to import and sell such goods.

The undersigned is satisfied that this pretence on the part of said Judson is a fraud upon the public, and is made for the purpose of injuring his business. Said Judson has never exhibited his pretended titles to any Court, or to the public, and he does not afford the undersigned any opportunity of commencing any suit against him in order to test these titles. Charles Goodyear could not give any valid titles to said Judson, or to any one else, after the titles he had conveyed to the undersigned. The question decided by Judge Ingersoll, in New-York, upon a preliminary motion and partial presentation of the case, was not decisive of the merits of the title of the undersigned, and the card published by said Judson shows that the Court was imposed upon by a pretended title in a third party, which said Judson now claims to have been in himself for the last six years.

The undersigned therefore cautions all dealers in articles of the above descriptions, containing vulcanized rubber, that no such goods can be lawfully sold in this country without his license and stamp, and that he shall prosecute, to the extent of the law, all persons infringing upon his said rights. Orders solicited and rights to use guaranteed, by

NEWS OF THE DAY.

The intelligence from Mexico, forwarded by telegraph from the Tennessee at New-Orleans, is of the highest interest. The dates from Vera Cruz are to the 22d, and from the City of Mexico to the 19th of April. The commander of the British squadron anchored at Sacrificios had demanded of President JUAREZ the payment of a million and a half of dollars upon the English debt, under penalty of a bombardment of the city. What action the Liberal government had taken we are not advised. Gen. MIRAMON, extricating himself from the Liberals at Cordoba, had made his way to the capital, where he had entered upon extremely arbitrary measures. Many foreign residents had been shot. A manifesto protesting against the American recognition of the Constitutional government had been issued, and the exequatur of Mr. BLACK, our Consul, having been withdrawn, he was ordered to quit the country. Of the progress of the leaguer of the city we have no advices.

Señor MATA, the representative of the Juarez Government in Mexico, will be presented to the President to-day, and will hand in his credentials. While in New-Orleans, the Señor succeeded in effecting a loan of $100,000, which has been transmitted to replenish the exchequer of the Liberals.

The arrival of the steamship Moses Taylor, from Aspinwall, viâ Havana, furnishes dates from the latter port to the 23d inst. The news is unimportant. The Empire City was in port, to leave for New-York on the following day.

The statement which reached us some days ago, to the effect that a secret movement was on foot at Pike's Peak for a descent upon Mexico, finds confirmation in subsequent advices. Agents for the movement are stated to be at Leavenworth and other points, stimulating emigration to the gold region, in order that sufficint material may be speedily accumulated. The leaders believe that disappointment at the actual condition of affairs at the diggings, will induce great numbers to embark in the new enterprise. It is believed that the first movement will be against Sonora.

The loss of life by the explosion of the steamboat St. Nicholas, as far as ascertained, amounts to 50—27 cabin passengers, and 23 deck passengers. Several others of the scalded will probably die.

The Cunard steamship Europa left this port yesterday at noon for Liverpool; she carried a large number of passengers and $532,424 in specie.

Bishop DOANE, of New-Jersey, died at his residence in Burlington yesterday. His age was 60.

The citizens of Oberlin, Ohio, held a public meeting on Saturday to express their sympathy with their fellow-townsmen now imprisoned at Cleveland.

No business of importance was transacted at the meeting of the Commissioners of Emigration yesterday. The weekly statement gives 1,480 as the number of emigrants having arrived during the week ending the 27th inst., making a total for the year of 9,728, and the balance sheet shows an overdraft of $14,679 98.

The third annual meeting of the Quarantine and Sanitary Convention was begun yesterday in this City. Dr. JOHN H. GRISCOM was chosen President, and Ex-Councilman CHAS. H. HASWELL first of a long list of Secretaries. The attendance from most of the seaboard cities was large. Several very valuable reports were presented, which will be the texts of their discussions to-day.

MICHAEL PHELAN, the champion billiard-player, was honored by a serenade, last night, from some of his friends and admirers.

In the case of JOHN D. PFORMER, tried in the Court of Oyer and Terminer, for the manslaughter of CHARLES STURGES, on the 25th of March, at the saloon No. 36 Bowery, the Jury, after having retired twenty-seven hours, returned last night into Court with a verdict of manslaughter in the second degree, and a recommendation to mercy.

The suit in the Supreme Court by the assignees of J. M. TRIMBLE, the architect, to set aside a transfer of the lease of the premises known as Laura Keene's Theatre, was continued yesterday.

In consequence of the rain, yesterday, the grand water celebration in Brooklyn was postponed yesterday to the great disappointment of some thousands of strangers who had come from distant places to join the celebration.

The Cotton Market, yesterday, was quite dull, and prices were altogether nominal. Flour was in good demand, and was generally 5c.@10c. ℔ bbl. dearer. Wheat and Corn were more active at strengthening rates. Rye declined to 84c. ℔ bushel. Oats were doing better. 2,000 bags of Laguayra Coffee were taken for export, on private terms. Sales were made of 1,235 hhds. Cuba Sugars, part at 6c.@6¼c.; 75 hhds. New-Orleans do., at 6½c.@7¼c.; 210 hhds, Melado do., at 4½c. ℔ lb; 190 hhds. Cuba Muscovado Molasses at 30c.@31c.; 205 bbls. do. do., at 32c., and 70 hhds. Clayed Cuba do., at 24c.@25c. ℔ gallon. Provisions were less active, and Mess Pork was cheaper. Rice, Naval Stores, Oils, and Whisky were moderately dealt in. The Freight engagements were less extensive. The total number of vessels of all classes in port was 528.

At the Live-Stock markets, the receipts of beef cattle have been more free since last week's market, the total number of fresh bullocks, at all the City yards, being 3,510, or 593 more than during the previous week. At the preliminary sales, on Tuesday, prices fell off ¼c.@½c. ℔ lb. on the estimated dressed weight, and a still further decline obtained yesterday. The closing sales, last evening were fully 1c. lower than last week, and a few hundred cattle were still unsold. About one-third of the bullocks were from New-York State, including a considerable proportion of distillery-fed animals. Only 169 milch cows came in during the week, but the demand is light, and prices not improving materially. Of veal calves there were 984, or 400 less than last week; prices a very trifle better. Receipts of sheep and lambs, 3,058, or 132 less than last week; prices a little improved. Receipts of swine, 3,641, with no material change in price or demand.

WATER FOR BROOKLYN.—The City of Brooklyn holds an ovation to-day over the completion of her water-works. It is an event which fully deserves the pomp with which she proposes to celebrate it. Pure water, next to pure air, and equally with wholesome food, concerns the health and happiness of the people. The want of it has been hitherto the chief lack of Brooklyn. In other respects she has offered to her rapidly increasing population unusual attractions, as her growth to the third rank of our American cities testifies. Her street-pumps afforded a fluid not indeed so bad in some localities as in others, but its general character was vile. In contrast with Croton it was intolerable. Now, however, Brooklyn has Croton of her own. She has drawn from small lakes or ponds, situated in the sands of Long Island, a bountiful supply of sweet, soft water, and is in this respect on equal footing with her neighbor. Well may her people rejoice.

The Acquittal of Mr. Sickles.

The result of the Sickles trial takes nobody by surprise. Everybody expected it. Our sage and modest neighbor, the Herald, takes the trouble to prove that he predicted it. Everybody in town and throughout the country did the same thing. The general remark now is that the only surprising part of the case is the fact that the jury should have left their seats, or at all events have been absent more than ten minutes. All this is natural enough. It is only astonishing that some of our cotemporaries should treat the result as extraordinary,—as without precedent, and as full of danger on account of the novel principle which it is assumed to have introduced into the administration of criminal law. Our whole judicial history is full of precisely similar cases. SINGLETON MERCER, in Philadelphia, followed the man who had seduced his sister, for days, and shot him in a coach:—he was acquitted by the jury. Mr. JARBOE, in Washington, met the seducer of his sister and asked him if he intended to marry her:—he answered no. JARBOE shot him on the spot and was acquitted. Mr. MYERS, in Virginia, went with a friend to a hotel, sought the seducer of his wife, found him in his room and shot him:—he was tried and acquitted. AMELIA NORMAN, in this City, shot the man on the steps of the Astor-House, who had betrayed her; she was acquitted. A Mr. STOMPH, in Maryland, shot at the seducer of his wife and was tried for an intent to kill:—he was acquitted. Mr. BOWYER, in Virginia, shot the seducer of his daughter a month after learning the fact, and was acquitted. Mr. SMITH, in Philadelphia, shot a Bank President, who had seduced SMITH's wife before her marriage:—he was acquitted. Mr. SHERLOCK, in Philadelphia, accompanied the seducer of his wife from a public room, shot him dead on the street and was acquitted. It would have been very remarkable, if, after all these precedents,—with not a solitary instance to the contrary so far as we are aware,—Mr. SICKLES should have been convicted of murder for killing the man who had profited by his friendship, accepted his hospitality, enjoyed his confidence, been a constant, a welcome and a trusted guest at his fireside, and during all this time had been maintaining the most criminal and infamous relations with his wife. Such an issue would have required some special explanation. The most strenuous efforts have been made in various quarters and on various grounds to procure a departure, in Mr. SICKLES' case, from this uniform action of our juries and criminal Courts in cases precisely like his own. They have all been defeated; and the result of his trial only adds one more to the list of cases in which juries have justified the killing of men who had committed the most cruel of crimes without the slightest danger of being punished by law.

It is very easy—and we see it is very common—to accuse the jurors in this case of perjury. The killing of KEY was proved—was indeed admitted;—how is it possible that an acquittal could follow? Simply because the crime alleged was not killing but murder, which means more than killing;—and in the judgment of the jury killing under such provocation is not murder, but justifiable homicide. Possibly this is not strictly legal reasoning,—it is not the cold, passionless, argumentative conclusion which the law in theory requires. But in this as in everything else wherein human hearts have any share, theory and practice are two things. Men are not calculating machines. They do not leave their hearts behind them when they enter a jury-box. They do not abandon or repudiate all human sympathies, all thought of human sorrows, all regard for the sanctities of family and of home, when they enter upon the solemn office of judging their fellow-men. They cannot do it, if they would,—and whatever legal theories may assume, the impassioned eloquence of counsel, the touching appeals to feeling, the powerful array of motives, of provocations and of temptations which are always urged, and which make up the glory of the criminal lawyer, prove conclusively that legal practice understands perfectly that it is with men and not machines, that the decision of all such cases must forever rest. The Jury in this trial acquitted Mr. SICKLES simply because they believed he had received ample provocation for his act,—that the outrage, the cruel wrong, the infamous disgrace inflicted upon him deserved the punishment it received,—and that punishment could not and would not have come from any other quarter. Nine tenths of the whole community hold the same belief and feel the same sympathy with Mr. SICKLES in consequence of it. The Tribune, which, in an excess of candor concedes that "doubtless Mr. SICKLES had been grievously wronged by KEY," deplores his acquittal because it weakens "reliance on the regular and orderly redress of grievances, through the instrumentality of law." That plea will avail only when the law affords redress for such grievances. But the Tribune knows perfectly well that it does not do so now. KEY was either to be punished by SICKLES or he was not to be punished at all—so far, we mean of course, as human punishment goes. The law has nothing to do with the matter—for it ignores the offence. And until society,—the public at large,—the authorities and law-makers of the land, will provide a punishment suitable for such crimes, it will be vain and impertinent to denounce those who, under such wrongs, take the office into their own hands.

The Tribune goes on to deduce what it calls a "moral" from this trial:—

> "The moral of this whole transaction is—Messrs. libertines! be careful not so much what you do, as to whose prejudice you do it. Select your victims carefully from among those who have no fathers. brothers or husbands who can wield a club or aim a pistol—prey upon the orphan, the defenseless, the lowly, or you sin at the risk of your lives. But choose prudently, and there are for you neither legal nor illegal terrors—there is fear neither of the prison nor of the bullet—there is, in short, perfect impunity."

We have no doubt that scores of those whom the Tribune thus addresses will act upon this advice and avail themselves of the distinction which the Tribune so conspicuously points out. But the paragraph is as sophistical as it is immoral. Are "fathers, brothers or husbands" not to protect their daughters, sisters and wives, lest others, less fortunate, should fail of protection when they need it? May not a man defend his goods lest other goods, less carefully guarded, should be stolen? Unquestionably it is most deplorable that women in any sphere and under any circumstances should lack defenders and protectors against the infamous, black-hearted scoundrelism which may seek their ruin;—and the law certainly owes them that protection. But until it provides it, those who have protectors in their friends must rely upon them.

The adulterer, it must be remembered, moreover, is not alone in his crime. And it is not merely as the protector of woman that man is tolerated by the sympathies of his kind in avenging such a wrong as this. The Tribune's theory that woman has no defence against the wiles of the seducer but the right arm of some male friend or kinsman is as senseless as it is degrading to the female sex.

The acquittal of Mr. SICKLES simply lends a fresh emphasis to the public reprobation of the crime of adultery. This is a lesson by which the tempted and the tempters of either sex may equally profit. The action of the jury in this case measures the general horror of that desolating desecration of the home and its altar for which no human law can possibly provide an adequate reparation. The jury in effect have said, that when a man is driven by the unendurable sting of such a wrong into the madness of taking the life of him who did it, his misery and his shame shall be counted to him for a justifying provocation.

In the main the trial of Mr. SICKLES has been admirably conducted. The whole case has been confined to two points,—first, the killing, and secondly the provocation;—and as every point in each was sharply contested, it is not easy to see how the testimony could have been curtailed. As usual in our courts, the speeches of counsel strike the public as having been needlessly elaborate and discursive,—and we have very little doubt they might have been considerably shortened on all sides without disadvantage. Judge CRAWFORD has presided, so far as we can judge, with dignity, strict impartiality and a clear and commanding knowledge of the law of the case. And the result, we have little doubt, will be regarded as substantially just by the great mass of the community, of all classes and in all sections of the country.

A Mexican Reverse.

If it were possible to be surprised at any turn events may take in that modern Arcadia, Mexico, the news we produce this morning might reasonably excite that emotion. It was but the other day that MIRAMON, shut up between two large bodies of the Constitutional army, each superior in numbers to his own, was supposed to be effectually cut off from the capital. Nor was this all. There were gathered about the capital itself a force of ten or twelve thousand Liberals, not only bent upon capturing the city, but confident of their ability to waylay the young hero, should he break through the blockade established by AMPUDIA and LA LLAVE, of Cordoba. Here was a particularly bad piece of business for the city, and even a worse one for the President. The city in his absence was left without any efficient organization for defence. His lieutenants in Mexico had neither men nor authority to secure either. The conclusion was very naturally drawn by American observers from these pregnant premises that the cause of the Church was finally lost, and that of the Liberals definitively in the ascendant.

At Vera Cruz the Liberal cause was in an equally auspicious state. After long suspense, the danger of a siege and possible capture at the hands of the enraged Reactionists, had been suddenly withdrawn. The European squadrons had warned the baffled Dictator that no injury to the persons or property of foreign residents would be tolerated in the event of an assault; an intimation which completely discouraged any lingering thought he might have had of attempting that enterprise. The city gates were thrown open; fugitives returned; the merchant resumed his seat in the counting-room, and the peaceful humdrum of traffic everywhere replaced the clang of arms and "dreadful note of preparation." At this happy moment came the American Minister with the long-desired recognition of the Juarez Government, and the felicity of heroic Vera Cruz was complete.

To have reversed this agreeable picture in so short a time would probably have been impossible out of Mexico. Coming from any other quarter, the story now told would be received as a saucy canard. As it is, we are assured by the telegraph, in advance of the mails by the Tennessee, that MIRAMON had broken through the two lines destined to intercept him, and had reached the City of Mexico; that his return had been signalized by the inauguration of a reign of terror; that foreign residents were summarily executed; that a formal protest against the American recognition of JUAREZ had been issued, and that the exequatur of Mr. BLACK, our Consul-General, having been recalled, that gentleman had been commanded to leave the country. Nor was the posture of affairs at Vera Cruz a whit more hopeful. JUAREZ had quarreled with the Spanish Consul, and canceled his exequatur; while the English, on the other hand, had demanded of the Liberal Government the immediate payment of an impracticable sum of money, with threats of promptly bombarding the city in the event of a refusal. Such are the changes a fortnight has brought forth. Fortune has given her wheel an entire revolution, and, for the moment, the case of our new friends of the Liberal flag has gone to the bottom.

The sensations of President BUCHANAN, upon the receipt of this information, it is painful to imagine. He will not be able to regard his recent move in Mexico with the least complacency. The consciousness of having miserably blundered will haunt him. To have waited a twelvemonth to determine, before taking sides, which was the winning party; and then to have mistaken, after all, a momentary gleam of light for broad day, and actually sympathized, in the face of the world, with the faction which most needed sympathy, is so palpable a departure from the policy of this Government toward Mexico, that it cannot fail to shock our venerable Executive from his propriety. Nothing could be more embarrassing. How is the treatment of Consul BLACK to be resented, seeing that by the recognition of JAUREZ, we are now obliged to treat MIRAMON as an insurgent against the Government de facto; and of course, can institute no reclamations against him? How are we to save our new allies, the Liberals, from annihilation at the hands of the English, who are threatening to strike a blow, fatal in either event, to the Constitutional cause? Is there any escape for the Administration from this puzzling dilemma?

AN OLD FRIEND IN A NEW FIELD.—We published yesterday the substance of the brief address to the public of California by Mr. JAMES W. SIMONTON, who has recently taken editorial charge of the San Francisco Bulletin. Mr. SIMONTON had been connected with the TIMES from its commencement, as its regular Washington correspondent—acting also, as occasion required, in other departments. He was sent by the establishment as our special correspondent to Utah, during the Spring and Summer of last year, and upon the close of the troubles there, proceeded to the Frazer's River region during the prevalence of the gold fever, and returned hither by way of California and the Isthmus. His letters during that extended and laborious trip contributed greatly towards enlightening the public mind concerning the distant and interesting regions which he visited. Mr. S. was also the correspondent of the London Times, in Utah, and wrote for that journal the extended and careful exposition of Mormon affairs which attracted so much attention.

In his new sphere of labor, Mr SIMONTON can scarcely fail to achieve decided and brilliant success. He has great vigor and activity of intellect, with sound judgment and untiring industry, is a clear and forcible writer, is perfectly resolute and fearless in his conduct, and uniformly courteous and just in his intercourse with others. He proposes to make the Bulletin an organ of the people, rather than of any party, and to hold a position of "armed neutrality" towards parties, cliques and factions of all kinds. He has our best wishes for his abundant success.

Mrs. Hartung's Case.

It will be remembered that upon the trial of Mrs. MARY HARTUNG, it was made to appear on the part of the prosecution, that only three days before her husband's death, she had purchased a quantity of arsenic. As the death was clearly shown to have been caused by arsenic, the fact of this purchase was of course a strong circumstance against the prisoner. Her own story in explanation was, that RHEINMAN had asked her to purchase the arsenic, telling her it was to be used in stuffing birds; that she bought it openly and without suspicion that it was to be put to any other use than this, nor did she imagine that it might have been administered to her husband, until after his death, RHEINMAN endeavored to prevent her from disclosing the fact of the purchase.

The testimony of Dr. JACOB REINHART, moreover, who was one of the chief witnesses for the prosecution, was of a character, if credited by the jury, to relieve the prisoner from the inference against her drawn from this purchase of arsenic immediately before the death which she stood accused of producing. Dr. REINHART was the physician who was employed to make the post-mortem examination of the deceased. He was called by the prosecution to testify as an expert to the appearances presented upon the autopsy. He testified to the condition of the body, describing the appearances of inflammation which were presented and the extent to which it had prevailed; and gave it as his opinion that the administration of arsenic so short a time as three days before death could not have produced so much inflammation as was observed. On the contrary, it was his belief that the poison must have been working in the system at least two months before death, to have caused the appearances presented. This opinion tended strongly to sustain the theory of the defence, that the crime must have been committed by some other hand than that of the wife; and, if accepted, quite upset the inference of her guilt, so far as it was drawn from the purchase she was shown to have made.

The prosecution were, however, not satisfied to abide by this testimony, albeit of their own witness. They called Professor PORTER, a chemist of distinction, though not, we believe, largely in practice as a physician, and put to him, as an expert, the question whether a physician could with any degree of certainty determine merely from the appearances upon the autopsy, the precise period of time at which inflammation, such as Dr. REINHART had described, was caused. The defence objected to this question, but the Court allowed it to be put, and the prisoner's counsel excepted.

It is understood to have been principally upon this exception that Justice WRIGHT has allowed the writ of error and stay of proceedings asked on behalf of the prisoner. It is urged by her counsel that there is no precedent for allowing one expert to express an opinion as to the ability of a fellow expert to form one. That in no case can the opinion of a professional witness be asked except the question be one of skill and science. That the question put to Dr. PORTER was not one of this description, but was a question of fact; whether a physician can have the ability or means to form an opinion as to the cause of a given state of facts. This, it is urged, is entirely beyond the limits within which the law allows the opinions of professional witnesses to be asked.

Justice WRIGHT expresses no decided opinion upon the merits of this exception, but he thinks, and in our view, very justly, that the question raised is of sufficient importance to entitle the prisoner to be heard upon it, in addition to the other exceptions taken in her behalf before the General Term. The enormity of the crime charged does not strengthen feeble proofs of guilt. He accordingly allows the writ, with an accompanying stay of execution. It is probable that the cause may be argued in error during the coming May Term.

Meantime the true friends of Governor MORGAN, will have reason to be glad that the annals of our State are not, for the present at least, to be disgraced by the hanging of a woman, who, however guilty in other things, may quite possibly be innocent of the crime for which she now lies under sentence of death.

The Quarantine Convention.

The National Quarantine and Sanitary Convention commenced its annual sessions yesterday in the hall of the College of Physicans and Surgeons, corner of Twenty-third-street and Fourth-avenue, and not as advertised at first in the Cooper Institute. Judging from the published lists of delegates to this Convention it can hardly fail to prove an occasion of interest, and "highly respectable." One year ago, when the Association was to meet in Baltimore, it was suggested by a prominent member of the Academy of Medicine that the Academy would do well to send a delegation to attend upon it. Dr. JOHN WATSON objected—the affair so far as he could learn was a mere gathering of politicians—of office-holders and office-seekers. The Academy of course took Dr. WATSON's advice and sent none of its sacred circle to adorn the Baltimore gathering. Notwithstanding this melancholy fact the Quarantine Convention was a very respectable affair, and quite satisfactory to those concerned. The Scientific Association was in full blast at the same time in Baltimore, and its stronger light rather diverted attention from the more modest convention. When it was proposed to hold the next meeting in New-York, a good deal of indignation was let off. The discourteous treatment of the Academy was rehearsed, and it was principally the intervention of Dr. HORACE GREEN, who happened to be present, and his repeated assurances that they would be heartily welcomed by the medical profession and by sanitarians generally, that finally induced them to consent to come to New-York. The Academy this year, being invited by Mayor TIEMANN, acceded to the proposition with pleasure, and honored itself by selecting a delegation of its strongest men to the approaching Convention.

Two years ago, when the Association had its first session, and at Philadelphia, New-York sent down a jolly crew of Aldermen and Councilmen to assist in its sanitary deliberations, but not a single physician.

The programme for the meetings is promising. We have room to learn a little more upon the topics that are likely to be discussed. We hope, before its adjournment, our authorities will discover why in Providence, R. I., the rate of mortality should be so much smaller than it is with us; why small-pox is so rare a disease in Boston, yet so common with us; why there is not in the civilized world a town of the same natural advantages that is so unwholesome as this. In a certain sense, it is true, these are local topics,—that is, they have a special local interest for the inhabitants of New-York. But there can be no objection, certainly, to making local facts illustrate general principles,—and Sanitary science at large may reap some advantage from a thorough exposure of the results which follow the reckless disregard of its principles which is habitually practiced in New-York.

A CHANGE FOR THE BETTER.—We see it stated that WM. M. BROWNE, Esq., at present connected with the editorial department of the Journal of Commerce has been invited to assume the editorship of the Washington Constitution. If he accepts, the Executive organ will have for its editor a good writer, a courteous controversialist and an accomplished gentleman. We do not believe that even he will be able to confer upon the journal in question any considerable influence, or render, through its columns, any great service either to the Democratic Party or to the country at large. The President's control over it will still be too immediate and absolute to permit us to hope for any such result. But Mr. BROWNE will improve its general tone and, unless he have superhuman abilities, he certainly cannot make it any duller or heavier than it has been hitherto.

It is very strange that men in power will still cling to the notion that an organ is necessary to an Administration,—and will sacrifice so much of character, self-respect and public money to its support. The people have outgrown the day of organisms. They are not in the least influenced by journals established and maintained for the express purpose of defending one party and denouncing the other, without regard to truth, justice or common sense,—which is the specific duty of party organs. It is very well undoubtedly for an Administration to have access to the public for the explanation of its plans and the vindication of its policy against misrepresentation; and this is perhaps specially necessary with us because Heads of Departments have not, as in England, seats in Congress and the chance of giving such explanations there. It would be much better, in our judgment, if our Secretaries had that privilege, as their explanations would then be at once authoritative and responsible. But in the absence of this provision newspapers must be employed in its stead, though it would be much more effective to make use of journals having a basis of their own, and having therefore some hold on public confidence, than to attempt to force upon the public the mere organs of a party.

Partisan journalism will, however, continue to maintain its hold with party men,—and we do not expect soon to see an Administration at Washington wise enough to discard its aid. Under JACKSON it was made formidable by the ferocious power of the Globe, which reflected accurately the character of the President himself. Under TYLER it fell into complete contempt, though not from lack of ability, for it is well known that most of the leading articles in the Madisonian were written by WEBSTER, CUSHING, and other prominent members of the Administration. When the Intelligencer has enjoyed the confidence of the Government, the functions of organism have been performed with dignity and without servility. The Republic, under TAYLOR, was vigorous and influential. But under PIERCE and BUCHANAN the central organ has been merely the echo of the personal caprices, ambitions and interests of the Executive,—and has naturally ceased to command either the respect or confidence of the people at large.

REBUILDING THE CITY HALL.—It is a mistake to suppose that nothing can be done toward building a new City Hall because the bill empowering the two Commissioners to spend a million of dollars failed to be enacted into a law. The $50,000 inserted in the Tax Levy was for the restoration of the ruin in the Park to its former appearance. But, beside this, there is the sum of $250,000, granted by the act of 1858, still standing to the credit of the Commissioners, which they can draw the day that they see fit to go to work with it. The law under which they were appointed required them to provide accommodations for all parties now crowded out of the scanty accommodations in the Park, and the only doubt in their minds is whether, seeing the money at command would not furnish the accommodations for one-fourth of these ousted parties, they are justified in making a beginning. But, taking a common-sense view of the matter, we understand that Messrs. CORLISS and HUNT are disposed to start. Their plan is to erect a building fronting on Chambers-street, near Broadway; leaving the east end in such condition that, when the funds are forthcoming, a larger building, to be surmounted by a dome, may be annexed, and of the same general style. In the course of time the brown-stone building on the City Hall Place and Chambers-street corner would be removed to make way for a twin of the Broadway corner edifice. The $250,000 would be quite exhausted, without a doubt, on the first structure. It is high time something were done toward re-collecting the scattered Offices and Courts that ought to centre in the Park; and as for the dirty, muddy ruins under which Justice was burned last September, they are black disgrace. Still, as an emblem and substantial sign of the ruinous condition of our municipality in all that pertains to its government and official control, they have their melancholy uses.

MODERN CENTAURS.—A very alarming piece of intelligence appears in the Police Reports of the present week. It seems that that formidable race of the Centaurs, for the extinction of which the Lapithæ so earnestly strove, has been revived in the nineteenth century, and in the City of New-York. At least we know not what other interpretation we can put upon the extraordinary fact that on Saturday last a gentleman, described as Mr. SOTHERN, an actor at Miss LAURA KEAN's Theatre, came before the Court to enter a complaint of grand larceny against the "groom" of one of his friends. The accused had been drinking, in company with one of his fellows, who officiated in the same capacity for Mr. SOTHERN, and had taken advantage of this bibacious intimacy to make away with Mr. SOTHERN's watch. For while the "grooms" of ordinary mortals confine their attentions to the horses of their masters, these "grooms," it seems, are charged with the personal care of their masters themselves. Mr. SOTHERN's "groom," for instance, presides, according to testimony, at his master's toilette, and keeps watch over one and another set of wardrobes "Mr. ANSON's groom" fulfills the like duties for Mr. ANSON. Clearly then these gentlemen must be centaurs. We have heard an emphatic and able gentleman described in the vehement vernacular of the sporting classes as "a whole horse-team and a horse to let," but we had always supposed this to be a mere figure of speech. Are we now to conclude that it describes a mere commonplace fact? Do the "grooms" of Mr. SOTHERN and Mr. ANSON, for example, habitually rub their masters down, curry them, give them a peck of oats, throw a blanket over them, and walk them up and down in the intervals of more vigorous exercise, lead them to water, put them up for the night, and give them a shake-down of straw? The speculations suggested by this singular state of things, are as endless as they are interesting, and we pause with no slight anxiety for a series of coherent and convincing replies. "A lion among ladies," as Bottom observes, "is a dreadful thing," but a group of centaurs on Broadway is a conception which it is still more frightful to entertain.

JOURNALISTIC ENTERPRISE.—Our religious cotemporaries of the weekly press are generally, from the necessity of the case, rather behind time in their reports of secular matters; but one of them yesterday, whose day of publication is Thursday, got the start of all the daily papers, and published a glowing leader on the Brooklyn Water Celebration, which, on account of the rain, was postponed until the next fair day. The paper in question, the Christian Intelligencer, says, with confident particularity:

> "The celebration yesterday was a grand affair. The public offices were closed, business in the city was generally suspended, and old and young rejoiced over the prospect of having an abundant supply of pure, wholesome water. The procession began its march early in the morning. The military, who were out in great numbers, mustering over 1,200, and the firemen, over 1,000, with their apparatus, together with invited guests, trades and associations, made the line some two miles in extent and the route of the procession over nine miles long. On arriving at the City Hall, an oration was delivered by RICHARD C. UNDERHILL, Esq., from the front of the Hall, which, with the singing of an ode, concluded the ceremonies of the day.
> The residents of the Eastern District united with great spirit in the celebration. A grand triumphal arch which had been thrown across Bedford avenue, near the fountain, was occupied by children from the Sabbath-schools of the districts, who sang various songs during the passage of the procession. Another interesting feature was the distribution by the children, of bouquets of flowers to the Commissioners, Mayor, and Common Council, accompanied by an address from one of their number to the President of the Board of Commissioners.
> In the evening there was a grand display of fireworks at the City Hall, and in the Eastern District, and Greenpoint. The public buildings were also brilliantly illuminated."

Our religious cotemporaries are so uniformly courteous in their notices of the daily journals that we take great pleasure in thus signalizing their enterprise and energy.

Mr. Church's New Picture.

A goodly company of artists, amateurs and connoisseurs, with a strong reinforcement of those whom the Spaniards describe as tertulios, or "nice men for a tea-party," since without belonging to any special art or profession they are able to form a good judgment and to converse agreeably in regard to all sorts of subjects, were last night assembled at Lyrique Hall, No. 765 Broadway, to enjoy the first public glimpse of Mr. CHURCH's latest completed work, the "Heart of the Andes."

The first "public" glimpse, we say, for though the invitations so courteously issued by Mr. McCLURE, (late of WILLIAMS & STEVENS',) who has undertaken the weighty task of engraving the new picture, were invitations to a "private view," the fact that nearly five hundred gentlemen were thus honored, and among them the whole of one of the City Clubs, sufficiently indicates the rather promiscuous character of the assemblage. It must, indeed, have been very nearly impossible for any one, who had not previously seen the painting in more favorable circumstances, to form anything like a fair estimate of its wonderful breadth and originality, of the power of its design and the beauty of its coloring. For not only was the Hall thronged to its utmost capacity, but the canvas was, of course, subjected to the "torture by gaslight;" and those who could succeed at rare intervals in seeing something, could never feel quite sure what it was that they saw. The interest of the occasion was really, therefore, confined to the evidence it gave of the honors which New-York is ready to pay to the first of her landscape painters. So far as the picture was concerned it was to be looked for rather in a genial, sympathetic and careful sketch of its scope and treatment prepared by Mr. THEODORE WINTHROP, of this City, than in the painter's own work. We venture to suggest that during the brief period which must precede its removal to London the painting should be transferred to the excellent Exhibition Room of the "Studios," in Tenth-street, where it can be seen by a really fine light. The objection that this building lies off the regular Broadway route of business and pleasure can hardly apply in such a case as this, for wherever such a picture as the "Heart of the Andes" is to be found, there Broadway, business and pleasure will rapidly follow.

The long and patient toil which Mr. CHURCH always bestows upon his paintings has ripened in this instance to a landscape which may fairly and fearlessly challenge comparison with the grandest imaginations in this kind. In baptizing his work the "Heart of the Andes" the artist has happily indicated the high poetic tenor of the composition. It is not like the "Niagara" a simply magnificent mirror of one scene and one moment in Nature, but like the noblest works of CLAUDE and TURNER, a grand pictorial poem, presenting the idealized truth of all the various features which go to the making up of the Alpine landscape of the tropics. You must look upon it long and often; study it minutely one day in its multitudinous details, and bearing them well in mind, recur to it again afresh to receive a new impression of its marvelous, much-embracing unity, before you can begin justly to appreciate what it is that the artist has attempted and achieved. The harmony of design which so subordinates all its opulence of gradations and perspectives as completely to exclude the panoramic in favor of the picturesque, is of so high a merit that the eye unfamiliar with landscape-painting of the first order will be as slow to apprehend its beauty, as the unpracticed ear is to take genuine delight in such musical wonders as those of LISZT and CHOPIN. What seems, at first, a chaos of chords or colors gradually rises upon the enchanted mind a rich and orderly creation, full of familiar objects, yet wholly new in its combinations and its significance.

It must not be supposed, however, that in emulating the comprehensiveness of TURNER's system of composition, Mr. CHURCH has stumbled upon such a weird web of chromatic effects as those pictures which TURNER used to send to the exhibition in the latter years of his life, and to which in violation of the Academic rules, he used to attach rings, in order to show which side should be hung uppermost. While Mr. CHURCH, like TURNER, leads the eye into distance with extraordinary boldness, and this not so much by lineal or aerial perspective as by the retiring gradations of color, Mr. CHURCH adheres more closely than TURNER to the conventionalities of his art, and also we are sure to the truth of nature, in his system of drawing. In speaking thus we have no intention of entering within our present limited space upon anything like a parallel between these artists, so like in the successful audacity of their pencils, yet so radically dissimilar in the spirit and the motif of their paintings. It is merely impossible not to be reminded of TURNER in looking at such a picture as this of Mr. CHURCH; just as impossible as it is not to recall the gold of CUYPH, the silvera skies of TENIERS, the "thunder-pillars" of WILSON, and the azure of TITIAN in studying the successive developments of the genius of the great Englishman.

The foreground of Mr. CHURCH'S "Heart of the Andes" introduces the eye at once to a broken line of characteristic tropic scenery. As in TURNER'S wonderful picture of the "Lancaster Sands," the lines that lead the eye into the distance are strengthened by seemingly whimsical rows of figures, so in the "Heart of the Andes," the vast expanse unrolls itself from a mighty portal of cliffs and trees, divided by a gush of gleaming waterfall, which most happily harmonizes the upper with the lower portion of the picture. To the left, a mass of foliage overhanging a narrow mountain-road, is superbly lighted by a splendor of sunshine on an abraded stump amongst the vines. The touch with which this light is rendered is one of the most masterly features of the painting. A cross, defined upon a real gulf of atmosphere, felicitously turns the eye in this direction off from the near heights over the immeasurable spaces of the middle distance. Pilgrims kneeling near the cross—a flashing king-bird—a glimpse of running water, enliven the scene. Far below, the middle foreground receives the shining cataract, and the shimmering stream into which it breaks. Then to the right looms high a creviced craggy bank, crowned with stately trees of the beech kind, which do here the artistic duty, so often fulfilled by the beautiful stone-pine of Italy for the pictures of TURNER. The middle distance is plain—plateau—immense in its suggestions of distance, delicious in the repose it gives to the eye. As you climb from it—up, up, up—the seeming interminable heights, slopes, rolls and waves of the colossal mountain range, which near in myriad-tinted shadows, and far off in etherially-shining snows, fulfills the grand vision, you are long in realizing how great the journey is, and over what vicissitudes of form and color the patient magician's skillful hand has led you on. It is only by degrees that you begin to estimate aright the power with which this colossal design has been draughted, the instinctive truthfulness and taste which have presided over the suggestive hues of that mighty Cordillera, which have arched over yonder summits that softly luminous atmosphere of mountain blue, which have rolled together those curtain clouds of the foreground. Not always successful in his treatment of foliage, Mr. CHURCH in this picture has wrought out persevering forest studies into an exquisite accuracy of effect. In a word, for we have room for but a single word more, the "Heart of the Andes" is a landscape as conspicuously complete in fullness and fidelity of detail as it is absolutely unrivaled in amplitude and vigor of composition. Hardly less original and striking than the picture, in its way, is the frame, of which the artist is justly proud, as of his special invention. For near three hundred years all the world of painters have been steadily falsifying their pictures with yellow glaze, for the special purpose of saving them from the violence of gilded frames. It has never occurred to anybody to question the eternal fitness and necessity of gilded frames themselves. Originally introduced as a modification of that aureola of gold which the earliest artists used to put about the saints, who were their only theme when "Art was still Religion," the gilded frame has kept its own like so many other facts, gilded and ungilded, by pure force of unquestioned prescription. Mr. CHURCH has questioned the prescription—and lo! it has nothing to say for itself! He has had made to himself a wonderful frame of walnut-wood, in the likeness of a vast, deep, window-piece, elaborately carved, and designed with a view to specific perspective, by an accomplished English carver. The effect of this frame is simply magical. It is a new sensation in art, giving a reality of atmospheric space to the picture, and a delicacy to the tones of the coloring, which must be seen to be at all appreciated or understood.

The Atlantic Telegraph.

We are informed that the negotiations between the English Government, the Atlantic Telegraph Company and the New-York, Newfoundland and London Telegraph Company have reached a point which promises to secure the Government's guarantee of 8 per cent., on the £600,000 capital being accepted. In view of this fact, as we learn from the same source the Atlantic Company are actively engaged in making the most thorough tests of the various kinds of cable adapted to the Atlantic line, and will be prepared to enter into the necessary contracts at an early day. In the meantime the Company have decided to expend a sum not exceeding $100,000 to resuscitate the present cable, and active preparations to this end will be commenced as soon as the weather will admit.

The heavy battery of Mr. HENLEY, which arrived at St. Johns, N. F., late last Fall, has not yet been sent to the telegraph station at Trinity Bay, owing to the ice, but will be in position within the next few weeks or days.

The Atlantic Company will not attempt to lay the new cable until July of next year.

MAGNANIMOUS JOHN BULL.—LOLA MONTEZ has been delivering a lecture in London on the difference between the manners of Englishmen and Americans, and wishing to gain the sympathy and applause as well as the half-crowns of her auditors, she complimented them on their behavior at the expense of their American cousins. The reporter of the London Times, in his account of the lecture, says:

> "Let us add, for the gratification of our Transatlantic cousins, that the applause was generally loud when they were praised, and that there was little or no response when they were censured."

Magnanimous John Bull! We wish we could feel sure that he would always be treated in the same manner on this side of the Atlantic; but candor compels us to the confession that we are too much given to applauding those who praise us, and of joining in the censure of our Transatlantic cousins. Perhaps if John Bull perseveres in his magnanimity he may win us to an imitation of his example.

Academy of Music.

The "Favorita" was played last evening; we lay some emphasis on the fact because with all the good intentions of the present arrangement there have been one or two recent disappointments. Signor STEFANI had recovered his voice, and sang with more than his usual ability. Madame GAZZANIGA was as ever, superb, in the rôle of the heroine, acting it with heart and mind, and singing the music admirably. MORELLI was on the whole better than he has shown himself this season, less gusty, strained and overwrought. The chorus was bad, and the orchestra everything that the worst-regulated mind could desire. The remarkable indifference which is shown to these matters during the present season can scarcely be ascribed to Mr. ULLMANN, who has gained his reputation by the very admirable regard he has paid to the ensembles of his operas. We trust that these matters will right themselves by Friday, when the "Favorita" is repeated for the second time.

To-day there will be an opera matinée—the whole of the "Traviata" with GAZZANIGA, STEFANI, &c., &c., in the cast.

THE AMATEURS.—The great amateur performance takes place to-night. "Dark Hour before Dawn," singing, &c., by amateurs distinguished and otherwise, belonging to this City. Proceeds to the Dramatic Fund; object good; let us hope the attendance will be the same.

CLASSICAL MATINEE.—A fine day conducted a fine audience to Dodworth's rooms, on Tuesday, when Messrs. MASON & THOMAS gave their fifth matinée. It has been the misfortune of these entertainments to wage perpetual war with the weather, and we fear to suffer by the somewhat unequal odds. We were heartily glad, therefore, to witness a sort of reconciliation. The programme opened with SCHUMANN'S trio, in D minor, well played and interesting; then we had a Romance for the violin, by HECTOR BERLIOZ, discursive and dreary, but delicately handled by Mr. THOMAS; then came a delicious Ballade, played and composed by Mr. WM. MASON, and admirable in every sense. There's no one in the country who can write these finished trifles so poetic in conception, so musician-like in treatment, like the gentleman who sang from the piano on Tuesday, for singing it was in every musical sense of the word. A very beggarly, poverty-stricken mechanical companion to this exquisite morceau was RUBINSTEIN'S Etude—a thing of endurance merely, and having no earthly or heavenly significance, beyond a degree of practical utility as a preparation to better things. After Mr. MASON'S performance, came an octette, by FRANZ SCHUBERT, opus 166, and forth five minutes long. There is modern vigor in this composition; the third and fourth movements are superb; there is abundance of melody, and nice treatment of the wind instruments, but it is indefinite and lengthy to the yawning point. The only thing that can recommend an octette, is brevity. In chamber music, eight players are not better than four. A quartette gives you the individuality of the instruments, in a perceptible conversation and pleasing way. Octettes are neither one thing nor another. They are not better than a quartette, and very much worse than an orchestra; in fact they give you a idea of a bad orchestra, and nothing more. The technical performance of the piece was creditable; all the pieces deserve the same praise.

CITY INTELLIGENCE.

TRIAL OF MUNICIPAL POLICEMAN McCUNE.—The trial of JAMES McCUNE, the Municipal policeman reinstated by the recent decision of the Court of Appeals, on the charges preferred against him by the Deputy Superintendent, as already published in the TIMES, was commenced on Tuesday, at 11 A. M., before the Police Commissioners. Gen. NYE presided and conducted the examination of witnesses against McCUNE, and Mr. DEVERRAUX appeared for the accused. Mr. A. J. VANDERPOEL, Counsel for the Board, sat beside Gen. NYE. Mr. DEVERRAUX objected to trying the case at this time, claiming that McCUNE had not had sufficient notice to prepare for the trial, and that DAVID KISSNER, a material witness, was too unwell to attend. He also objected to trying the case before Commissioners NYE, BOWEN and STRANAHAN, who, from their connection with the subject in controversy, might be presumed to be biased in any judgment they might give. These objections were overruled. Gen. NYE said he could decide the case without prejudice, that McCUNE had had due notice of the trial, and that Capt. KISSNER'S testimony could be obtained after the other testimony was taken. Deputy-Superintendent CARPENTER testified that on June 18, 1857, an order was issued through him, the General Superintendent being absent, directing the policemen of the Fourteenth Ward to report for duty at the Metropolitan Police Head-quarters; that neither McCUNE nor any other Fourteenth Ward officer had obeyed that order; that the Municipal Police force of that Ward acted in opposition to the Metropolitan Police authorities. Capt. WILLIAMSON testified that he promulgated the order referred to, and that the men of the Fourteenth Ward, instead of acknowledging the authority of the Board, hurrahed for Capt. KISSNER; that he served notices of trial and of dismissal, by leaving them with Lieut. BROWER, whom he informed what they were, and asked to give them to the men. EDWARD COLLINS, MICHAEL GILFILLAN, Policeman DAVIN and Policeman HURLICK, were severally examined, and gave testimony similar to that above set forth. The case was adjourned to Thursday, at 10½ o'clock A. M.

COMMISSIONERS OF EMIGRATION.—The Commissioners of Emigration met yesterday afternoon. The weekly report shows that 1,460 emigrants arrived during the week ending the 27th inst., making a total for the year of 9,728, against 10,879 to the same date in 1858. There are in the Ward's Island institution 1,367 inmates, and in the Marine Hospital 127. The balance sheet shows an overdraft of $14,679 98. The Pennsylvania Railroad Company notified the Board that the Directors would meet next Friday to consider the arrangements to be made for forwarding emigrant passengers from Castle Garden. The communication was referred to the Committee which has the subject in charge. Commissioner JELLINGHAUS submitted informally some propositions, which he wished should govern railroads. After some irregular conversation, the matter was referred to the Castle Garden Committee to report at the next meeting. The Board then adjourned to meet next Wednesday. Workmen are engaged reflooring the main building, and repairing the pillars which support the roof.

A DANGEROUS COUNTERFEIT.—A well-known Wall-street broker, late yesterday afternoon, called at the Police Telegraph office in Broome-street, and exhibited a counterfeit two-dollar bill on the Taunton Bank of Massachusetts that had been passed on him. The bill is a photograph of the genuine issue, and splendidly executed. The vignette is the Massachusetts State coat-of arms, with a female on one end of the bill, and a man on the other. The police were ordered to notify the shopkeepers, but it was discovered that a number of the bills had been passed in different sections of the City before the police called on the storekeepers.

MR. LORD'S LECTURES.—The Rev. JOHN LORD commences this evening a second series of his popular lectures, being encouraged to do so by the resolutions adopted at the close of the last one, which will be found in another column. These lectures are distinguished by great vigor of style and clear and comprehensive views. They are eminently interesting and instructive, and are certainly among the best of their class which have ever been heard in this City. Mr. LORD'S subject this evening is "Hildebrand," which affords fine scope for his style of treatment.

FIRE IN BROADWAY.—The alarm at 10½ o'clock last evening in the Fourth District was caused by a fire at No. 536 Broadway. The fire is supposed to have originated from a stove in the back portion of the first floor, occupied by WILLIAM RAYMOND & Co., manufacturers of metallic burial cases. Their damage is about $2,500; fully insured. The upper portion of the building is occupied by HENRY STOREY, cabinet manufacturer, and his loss by fire and water is about $300; insured for $40,000. The building is owned by Mr. ALAUNTZ, and is damaged to the amount of about $300; insured.

ORGANIZATION OF THE NEW HIGHLAND REGIMENT.—The organization of the new Highland regiment, under the command of Col. MCLEAY, will take place on Thursday, the 28th inst. The officers will be inspected at 4 o'clock P. M., and the body of the battalion at 7 o'clock P. M. Major-General SANDFORD, General EWEN, Brigade-Major TAYLOR and a number of distinguished officers of the First Division are expected to be present. The whole will be inspected by Brigade-General GEORGE P. SHERMAN, the Inspector General.

BOARD OF TEN GOVERNORS.—The Board of Governors met on Tuesday. A communication from CHAS. H. HASWELL, Chairman of the Committee of the Sanitary Convention, inviting the Board to send a delegation to said Convention, was received, with a recommendation to the same effect from the Mayor. Governor BRUENNINGHAUSEN and five others were appointed to attend. At the Mayor's suggestion, the members of the Convention are to be invited to visit the Institutions.

ELECTION OF VESTRYMEN FOR TRINITY PARISH.—The election for Vestrymen in Trinity Parish took place on Tuesday. There was some contest growing out of discontent regarding the manner in which the temporal affairs of the Corporation of the Church had been managed during the past year. The old officers were reelected, however, with the exception of Mr. LIVINGSTON, whose place has been filled by Ex-Surrogate BRADFORD.

BIRTH IN AN ALLEY.—CATHARINE E. YOUNG, belonging to Elizabethport, N. J., while passing through the streets, yesterday afternoon, was suddenly taken ill; and stepping into an alley-way at No. 34 Greenwich-avenue, she sat down upon some steps, and in a few minutes gave birth to a fine male infant. The little stranger and its mother were taken care of by the neighbors.

EFFECTS OF FAST DRIVING.—As Mr. JONES, proprietor of the Clarendon Hotel, was taking a drive on Tuesday afternoon on the Bloomingdale road, he met Mr. G. C. HAWTHORN, who was also taking a drive. Both had fast horses and were driving rapidly, when, unfortunately, the shaft of Mr. HAWTHORN'S vehicle penetrated the breast of Mr. JONES' horse, killing him instantly. The horse was valued at $1,000.

DEATH FROM FALLING FROM AN OMNIBUS.—THOMAS NAYWOOD, who resided at No. 92 West Fortieth-street, some time ago fell from the top of a Broadway stage, struck his head against the pavement. Yesterday he died from apoplexy superinduced by the injuries he received.

VISIT TO THE INSTITUTIONS.—The Odd Fellows' visit to the institutions upon Blackwell's and Randall's Islands, which was to have taken place yesterday, was postponed on account of the storm. Should the weather be propitious, they will make the tour to-day.

DISCONTINUED.—All proceedings pending against HORATIO F. AVERILL, and recently adverted to in the columns of this paper, have been dismissed, and we understand that a letter of apology has been addressed to Mr. AVERILL by several of the contending parties.

STEAMER GRANITE STATE.—It is reported that the steamer Granite State is about to be sold to the Hartford and New-York Steamboat Company.

Police Reports.

MORE YOUTHFUL BURGLARS.—Two youths, each about 17 years old, were detected at an early hour yesterday morning coming out of a butcher shop in East Thirty-second-street, carrying a large side of fresh beef. As soon as they saw the eyes of a Policeman upon them, the beef fell and their heels rose. The Policeman, however, captured them, and Justice KELLY locked them up for trial. They gave their names as John Carren and George McGarr. The same Magistrate made similar disposition of a youth named Matthew McAllen, accused of breaking into the residence of Charles Wooster, No. 415 Sixth-avenue, on Sunday last, while the family were at Church, and stealing a quantity of jewelry and clothing. A portion of the stolen property was found in his possession.

ANOTHER STABBING CASE.—Michael McGonegal and Hugh McLaughlin had a quarrel, about 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon, at the foot of James-street, and during the altercation McLaughlin drew a knife and stabbed McGonegal in the arm, inflicting a very ugly wound, and then fled. He was captured, however, by the Police, and locked up. The wounded man had his wound dressed at the Fourth-Ward Station-house.

Coal has been found in Ione and Buckeye valleys, El Dorado county, California, the bed being from twelve to fifteen feet in thickness.

BROOKLYN INTELLIGENCE.

Postponement of the Water Celebration.

Owing to the inclement weather the proposed water celebration did not take place yesterday as announced, but was postponed "until the first fair day" by the Special Committee having the matter in charge. Subsequently the Board of Aldermen held a meeting, when a resolution was adopted, "That the procession take place to-morrow, if pleasant, and if not, the procession be postponed indefinitely;" so that if this Thursday, the 28th of April, should prove to be pleasant, the programme as heretofore announced will be carried out. Otherwise, the oration, it is understood, will be delivered in the City Hall, and the procession will be dispensed with. The Committee did not definitely decide not to proceed with the demonstration until nearly 9 o'clock, hoping that the storm would abate. The order was finally made, much to the discomfiture and disappointment of many, who seemed to prefer a tramp in the rain to losing another day. The invited guests from different parts of the country were early in the city, and reported themselves to the Committee of Arrangements in waiting at the City Hall. The delegates were taken in charge by the Aldermen and prominent citizens, and suitable arrangements were made for their accommodation while in the city. During the day they were taken to see the Ridgewood Reservoir, at East New-York, and also the pump well near the same locality. Subsequently the party, numbering about two hundred and fifty persons, dined at SNEDIKER'S. The visiting firemen were received by their brother firemen, and properly cared for. The two Fire Departments, despite the storm, marched through some of the principal streets, and made a creditable display. At night the visiting companies left for their homes, as they had not come prepared to stay another day. The military mustered at an early hour in the morning, ready to fall in at a moment's notice, but before the time arrived they were dismissed for the day. On the whole, omitting the weather, the visitors express themselves much gratified at the manner in which they passed the day.

Should to-day prove to be fair, the procession will form at 10 o'clock A. M., on Bedford-avenue, right resting on Myrtle-avenue.

The American Telegraph Company's Printing Telegraph.

Some years ago, when the Printing Telegraph Instrument was first put in operation in this country, Mr. F. O. J. SMITH, then and now part owner of the Morse Patent, sneeringly remarked that his Durham bull would carry one thousand words from Boston to New-York in much quicker time than the same number could be transmitted over the Printing Telegraph wires. That bull, however, was never entered for the contest, for the fallacy of its owner's boast was very speedily demonstrated by the extraordinary speed and efficiency with which the Printing Telegraph Instrument worked, even at the commencement of its career. Since then, it has on more than one occasion astonished the public with the amount of work it was capable of performing with a given time—especially on occasions when long and exciting debates in Congress called for an extraordinary activity along its wires. But it was reserved for the recent Sickles trial at Washington to furnish the occasion for a full test of the power of the printing instrument, and its capabilities thus elicited have astonished the public more than ever. Every day for three consecutive weeks from five to six columns of that trial were sent to us from Washington over the wires of the American Telegraph Company, at an average of 2,000 to 2,500 words per hour, and with an accuracy almost miraculous. In order to come within the mark, we will put the average at from twelve thousand to fifteen thousand words per day, making the aggregate for the twenty days about one hundred columns of the size of the TIMES, and furnishing matter enough for an octavo volume of six hundred closely printed pages, and this, too, without serious detriment to a very heavy business to the regular private patrons of the line. We venture the assertion, without the fear of contradiction, that such a feat in telegraphing has never been before performed since the first wire was stretched. The expense attending this telegraphic arrangement is of course very great, but as the telegraph has become a fixed institution in newspaper enterprise, we could no more get along without it than we could without our ten-cylinder presses, and were it twice as expensive as it is, we should nevertheless cheerfully resort to its facilities for the benefit of our readers.

We wish in this connection to say a word or two in behalf of the efficiency and courtesy exhibited on the occasion of this Sickles trial by the employes of the American Company's Washington Printing Telegraph lines. To Messrs. WESTERVELT & TALCOTT, of Washington; Mr. HINCHMAN, of this City, and Mr. THAYER, of Philadelphia, with their active and courteous assistants, especial praise is due for their untiring efforts on that occasion. Their arrangements were admirably made, and they were carried out smoothly and efficiently to the end of the trial.

Southern Route for Transatlantic Steamers.

NEW-YORK, Wednesday, April 27, 1859.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

The justly-merited reputation for impartiality and justice which your journal enjoys has led me to solicit the use of your columns in noticing a depreciatory and abusive article in the New-York Herald of yesterday, referring to a proposed steamship line between Norfolk and St. Nazaire, a port of France, and the connection of my father therewith. This is an enterprise in which the people of Virginia feel a deep interest, and my father, in coöperating with them, has petitioned the Emperor of the French for aid, in the form of a postal appropriation.

To stigmatize the undertaking, the Herald, in a spirit of petty rivalry and narrow egotism, has descended to a gross misrepresentation of facts, and misconstruction of language. The intended blow, however, must recoil upon itself, for in attempting to read others a lesson, it has betrayed its own ignorance.

The Herald, with characteristic modesty, daily lavishes compliments upon itself, and boasts of being the only journal that thoroughly understands the political and commercial affairs of Europe—especially of France. With such pretensions, it ought at least to know that St. Nazaire, instead of being an inland town, is a seaport at the mouth of the river Loire, with an accessible harbor or roadstead, and actually less inland than New-York. The French Government have expended millions in constructing deep and capacious docks, and the railroads that connect its quays with the best manufacturing districts and markets of the Empire give it a commercial position and importance second to few other ports upon the Continent. Before the Herald attempts to instruct others in geography, it would doubtless do well to take a few preliminary lessons itself.

As to fogs and icebergs, how often have we read in the City newspapers, including even the Herald, of their detaining vessels on the northern transatlantic route, and of having sometimes been the cause of serious disasters. The more Southern route from Norfolk is obviously free from danger, and the Herald could well afford to spare ill-natured comment upon the efforts of those honestly endeavoring to establish the proposed line; especially as its successful operation could in no wise affect prejudicially the commercial standing of the great commercial metropolis of this continent.

Respectfully,

L. E. LACOUTURE.

GENERAL WILLIAM WALKER IN CALIFORNIA.—The San Francisco Bulletin says: "General WILLIAM WALKER arrived in town by the steamer of yesterday, traveling under an assumed name. He is accompanied by one of his Nicaraguan officers, Col. BRUNO NATZMER. The arrival has created quite a stir among the restless adventurers in our midst, from whose numbers fillibuster expeditions never fail to draw their largest supply of recruits. Passengers with him upon the Golden Age state that he never made the slightest allusion to future movements, though he conversed freely in relation to the events of his past career. His avoidance of the topic presents solid evidence that he is contemplating some new movement violative of the letter or spirit of American law; and we understand that the revenue officers of this port have already got their eyes upon a vessel lying in the harbor, and are inquiring whether she is not really destined to relieve our community of a new load of enterprising adventurers."

Burnett's Cocoaine.
A NEW AND DESIRABLE PREPARATION FOR THE HAIR.—We with pleasure refer our readers to the preparations of Messrs. JOSEPH BURNETT & CO., of Boston.

The want of their Cocoaine has long been felt in order to dispense with the many inferior preparations now in use.

We speak, after giving it a trial, and can conscientiously recommend it to the old and young as being a preparation of inestimable value for the purposes intended.—St. John (Canada) News.

Mr. BONNER has the pleasure of announcing that CHARLES DICKENS, who is universally conceded to be the most popular author living, has been engaged to write a Tale expressly for the columns of the LEDGER, and that he is now at work upon it. Advance sheets of Mr. DICKENS' stories have, at different times been obtained by American publishers; but this is the first time that a Tale has been written expressly and solely for an American periodical by such an eminent European author as Mr. DICKENS; and yet Mr. BONNER would not have the public suppose that he thinks there is anything very remarkable about this engagement; it is only part and parcel of his policy.

HUNDREDS OF THE UNFORTUNATE are disappointed of a cure by not calling on DR. HUNTER at first, the Hunterian Dispensary, No. 3 Division-st., New-York City. Established in 1834, for the Preservation of Human Life. PRIVATE CONSULTATION.—Dr. HUNTER has for thirty years confined his attention to diseases of a certain class, in which he has treated not less than fifty thousand cases, without an instance of failure. It is $1 a vial, and cannot be obtained genuine anywhere but at the old office, No. 3 Division-st. Book for nothing, that treats of the evil effects of early abuse and indulgence, is embellished with elaborate colored engravings, portraying every feature and phase of disease, exposes the fallacy of the ordinary modes adopted for the cure of local as well as hereditary maladies, and gives the only safe and infallible remedy for expunging every trace of the virus from the system.

A CARD. MLLE. PICCOLOMINI TO THE PUBLIC. Before saying adieu to a public which has treated me with proverbial generosity, I beg permission to express in the best way offered me, the promptings of my heart. I came to this country, so grand, so free and so charming in its youth and freshness, with high hopes, which have been more than realised. I am a miracle, then. An artist who is satisfied is a miracle. But perhaps the public, or a portion of it, has been disappointed. This is not my fault. Perhaps the announcements on one side were too rose-colored, while the denunciations on the other were too severe. I never pretended to divine genius. I am simply an artist, who does the best she can in her humble way, and is proud to stoop for the smallest flower that may be thrown at her feet. There may be others who have the divine spark. Perhaps many others approximate it nearer than I. I love my art, and devote my whole soul to it. I only ask the public to be fair; you have been more. You have been generous, and whatever success I may have hereafter, the reminiscences of my American tour will be among the sweetest of my life's souvenirs. I would rather stay here than go to Europe. But one—even a spoiled girl, and a prima donna as well—cannot always have her own way; so I must go on the first of June. And, therefore, I have written this in advance of my farewell performances to thank the public of the whole country (and of New-York especially) for the favor that has been lavished upon me. More than all this, I shall endeavor in the rôles which I am to undertake for the first time here to show that this previous favor has not been thrown away, but has encouraged me to new exertions. And so I salute you all. I would be charmed to do so personally, but the country is so large, and the population so immense, that I really fear the time would not be sufficient. The public's devoted, MARIA PICCOLOMINI.

LECTURES.

MR. LORD'S HISTORICAL LECTURES.—At the close of these lectures on Monday evening, the Hon. SAMUEL B. RUGGLES offered the following Resolutions:

Resolved, That we regard it a peculiar privilege to have listened to the admirable historical lectures of the Rev. Mr. LORD, presenting faithful and glowing pictures, in language at once vigorous and original, eloquent and descriptive of the men, the morals, the arts, and the government of other ages.

Resolved, That this American community of ours, in its comparative isolation from the older world, and its historical traditions, has reached a point in its onward march, where it particularly needs the instruction and guidance derived from historical knowledge, and a comparison of our present civilization with that of other countries and epochs; so that the attentive study of their history has now become a matter of general public necessity.

Resolved, That we know no way in which that study can be made more generally attractive and instructive than public lectures like those which have just closed; so replete with accurate knowledge, artistic feeling, lofty principles, and sound christian morality.

Resolved, That we respectfully invite Mr. LORD to extend his course to such length as he may find convenient.

The resolutions were seconded in a glowing speech by Dr. ASA D. SMITH, and adopted unanimously.

Mr. LORD announced a second series of lectures, to commence to morrow evening.

SECOND SERIES.—THE REV. The Impending War—Position of the Contending Parties.

From the London Times, April 12.

Every hour brings disquieting tidings from those Courts where peaceful and warlike counsels are still debated with unequal chances, but with a yet undetermined result. The rumors of an actual declaration of war which were rife in all societies a few hours since may, perhaps, be only the shadow of events that are really not far distant. Although destitute of authority, they probably embody the belief of well-informed persons as to the certainty of a fact which time has not yet brought forth, and only prematurely give form to a necessity which is felt to be at hand. It would be vain to shut our eyes to the truth that the preservation of the peace of Europe appears to the closest observers to become from day to day more desperate, and that all probability favors the belief that the struggle is even now upon the eve of its commencement.

The present position of the little Kingdom of Sardinia is well calculated to concentrate upon it the interest of Europe. If the cloud is to burst, the first red drops will fall upon her soil. She may have been provoking, and we have not been slow to point out her faults or to censure her rashness; but, if violence is imminent, it is upon her that it is about to be used. That small plot in the map of Europe, protected by the neutral State of Switzerland on the north, and washed by the Mediterranean on the south, is pressed upon on each side by two great European Powers whose mutual dislike has long tended to war, and who appear likely now to join in conflict. To the east the Ticino marks a feeble boundary line, beyond which lie the Austrian provinces of Venetian Lombardy, bristling with strong fortresses and choked with armies. To the West, beyond the barrier of the Cottian Alps, lies France, and in the passes of Mount Dauphin and in the contiguous districts are concentrated masses of French soldiers, awaiting the signal which is to bid them cross the friendly frontier. Between these two expectant hosts Sardinia herself stands in attitude of war, confident, determined, rather boastful and eager for conflict. Her last act was a bitter insult to her gigantic enemy; her inveteracy towards Austria is as intense as any individual can feel towards another whom he fears, and hates, and hopes to plunder.

This is the position of the parties, and the chances of collision which this position itself creates are multiplied by every attendant circumstance. Austria has 200,000 men now encamped behind the Ticino; she has the horses, artillery, and military stores necessary to the efficiency of this great host; she is enduring a daily expenditure which is consuming her internal resources, and edging her on inch by inch towards the catastrophe of an inevitable bankruptcy. Notoriously involved as Austria has long been, straitened as are her public resources, and overtaxed as are her people, it is not to be supposed that she has embarked in this ruinous expense for the mere luxury of conquest, still less for the desire of a barren revenge. She must feel that her existence is menaced, or she would not be there on that distant frontier river, determining all her military force to that particular spot, and bringing such tremendous power to bear upon an adversary apparently so little worthy of so great a demonstration. She must feel that fate has prepared for her an inevitable struggle with an adversary much greater than Sardinia, and that this is a struggle she cannot avoid. Be she right or wrong in her conclusions, she must hold this belief, or she would never have gone into so prodigal and wasteful an expenditure. She might have despised the small provocations of Sardinia, and, with strong garrisons in her Lombard cities, might have been content to wait for those changes in combinations which time always brings. But Sardinia is only the shieldbearer to the giant. Austria must have felt that the fight was inevitable. Perhaps she has deliberately resolved that, since the war must take place, it is better to provoke it in a corner of her empire, better to seek it among the hills and valleys of a country she would delight to punish, than have to meet the French armies on the old Austerlitz road, or to fight them under the walls of Vienna. It may be, and it probably is, in the deliberate acceptance of what she conceives to be a necessity that she is now sending 50,000 more troops into those already densely garrisoned provinces, and preparing to send 80,000 more upon their footsteps. It is probably in the development of a matured policy that she is now issuing general orders to the troops at Milan, promising them a third victory over the Sardinians, and recalling to their memory the day of Novara. This policy is explicable, but not in the sense of peace. How far it may be justified by the force of the necessity it is very difficult to say. The Emperor of the French bleats as gently as a lamb while all these wolves are howling. Nothing can be more ardent than his desire for peace; nothing can, in his belief, be more impossible than that the peace of Europe can be disturbed. Yet the white tents of the Army of the South whiten the lower hills of the Dauphiny Alps, Grenoble hears the gathering of troops, there is a drawing together of masses towards the passage into Sardinia by Chambery, Algeria is relieved of all superfluous defence, and another army is said to be now ready to leave Paris. This looks rather like talking peace and acting war. But what is still more demonstrative even than the French Emperor's peaceful declarations is the confident tone of the Sardinian Minister. It suggests the unwelcome conviction that his is the office to throw the spear and break the armed truce. It may not become necessary thus to take the initiative, for Austria seems to be making haste to put herself in the wrong. She has hitherto failed to do that justice which would have placed her in a position to demand the sympathies of all sober politicians, and, if we may put trust in the late advices, she appears to be about to precipitate the contest, and thereby to give every advantage to her enemies. But, whatever may be the rights of the question in dispute or the merits of the parties to the quarrel, it would seem that the hope of preventing the outbreak is now fast dissolving. Matters have reached such a pass, that to all the three prospectively belligerent parties peace is more expensive than war. A campaign would, at any rate, clear off some of the elements of the present enormous outlay; a short and decisive conflict would be better than this wearying and wasting state of suspense. Those 200,000 men cost rather more in Lombardy than they would at Novara or at Turin. Nor can Louis Napoleon's preparations be kept up without an inconvenience which must impress itself upon future financial statements. If we consider the present crisis in relation to the finances of the three countries, it will appear that a chronic state of preparedness for war is more dangerous to the system than an acute fit of actual warfare. A few weeks since one of the Paris papers told us that the Congress would deliberate over a barrel of gunpowder. It appears now very probable that the slowmatch is burning down to the powder, and that the explosion will take place before the members of the Congress can take their seats.

Yet this is the time—when every vibration of the electric wire is consulted anxiously lest it bear news that the die is thrown and the Ticino is passed—which the Ministers have chosen to decapitate the legislative authority of this country, and to deprive Great Britain of the great council of the nation. For six weeks the chief legislative, and even practically the chief administrative, authority of England must be not only dormant, but dead. The only voice by which foreign Courts can know the opinion of the nation will be silent; the only assembly that can declare what the policy of England shall be will be dissolved; the only Estate of the realm which can direct the resources of the country and can enforce opinion by substantive deeds will be absent at the moment of perhaps the greatest crisis that has occurred, or will occur, in the latter half of this century; England will be inops consilii. Has the occasion of this dissolution been equal to its cost?

What the Proposed Congress Can do for the Benefit of Italy.

From the London Times.

Rome, Tuesday, April 5, 1859.

While a few sanguine people are disposed to expect the best results from the meeting of the Congress on the Italian question, and the majority are without hope, I meet with but very few who have well defined views as to what are the legitimate objects of consideration for the great Powers. All appear to me to have very cloudy or very erroneous ideas as to what is to be discussed or done, and yet there are few subjects on which, at the present moment, it is so desirable that the public mind should be thoroughly enlightened. Many of our mere café politicians, I believe, are of opinion that the Congress will work an immediate change on the Italian Government, that matters of internal administration will be discussed, remedies proposed, applied, and enforced, and a kind of "Carlo Dolce" softness thrown over the whole aspect of affairs. On what principles our diplomatists will proceed in treating the great subjects which will be shortly brought before them it is impossible for me to say; but as your correspondent is necessarily the depository of the sentiments of many, and from his position and residence in the country has the opportunity of forming a juster opinion of what is desirable and practicable here than others at a distance, you will permit him to state what he believes should be avoided and what followed.

If any error greater than another can be committed, it will, in the opinion of most here, be in interfering with the internal administration or government of the Italian States; first and foremost, because it will be a violation of the great principle of non-intervention, which it is the desire of every Italian to see established, and which, it is assumed, it is the object of the Congress to secure. In fact, there could not be a grosser inconsistency than that, while trying to bind over Austria not to interfere, the Congress should, in the most offensive manner, intermeddle in the internal arrangements of a State. It is foreign intervention which has been the great curse of Italy; left to themselves the Italians would long since have settled all differences with their rulers, and a much better state of things would have existed than we at present find. Besides, let the Congress discuss and propose what remedies may seem best adapted to the removal of the evils under which this country is suffering—how are they to be applied? Will the unwilling patient take the medicines of the doctor he has never called in? Supposing that none of the Italian States are willing to send representatives to Congress do you imagine that they will adopt the reform in the preparation of which they have not even been consulted? When certain reforms had been recommended to the Court of Rome in 1831 by the five great Powers, the other Italian States protested against them "as dangerous to the security of their States." So much we gather from the very Jesuitical answer of Prince Metternich to an admirable letter of Mr. Henry Seymour, at that time our diplomatic agent in Rome. His letter is dated the 7th of September, 1832, and announces his orders to retire to Florence, as the British Government was persuaded that discussion would produce no results. Well, then, is it probable that the Italian Powers would be less likely to remonstrate when the question is of the reform of their own States than when it was of the States of a neighboring Prince? And should they do so, as in all probability they will, what could the Congress do? Simply nothing, and precious time would have been lost, and every Italian sovereign more indisposed to change, from the very success which had attended his resistance, and more hostile to his people for whose sufferings he had been called in question. The greatest evil of all attending this intermeddling with the administration of every separate State would be, that the attention of Congress would be called off from what is the main, the sole legitimate object to which it should be directed. It is my firm and intimate conviction, after a long residence in Italy, and much and serious thought on the subject, that if this country is to be regenerated, it must be not by an action upon the Governments of the separate States of which it is constituted, but by an action rather upon that great Power which controls them all, inspires them with their sentiments of opposition to whatever is popular and progressive, and has ever shown herself the enemy of all advance at the very moment that hopes of it were entertained. Writing from Rome, the events of 1831 occur to me as a happy illustration of the truth of what I am asserting. In that year the five Powers drew up a memorandum recommending certain reforms in the Papal States. Cardinal Bernetti, in a letter dated the 3d of June, 1831, and addressed to the Count St. Aulaire, adopted those reforms; but time passed on and nothing was done, and at last Prince Metternich, in a letter to Mr. Seymour, declared that the Pope had refused two principal points of the reforms which had been already conceded, and that neither Austria nor any other power could dictate the law to his Holiness. The Austrian Government felt itself compelled to yield to the legitimate resistance of the Pope. In 1831 the five Powers drew up the memorandum recommending the adoption of certain reforms. Moreover, they were accepted by the Papal Government. In September, 1832, Prince Metternich makes known the "resistance" of the Pope, and the necessity under which the Austrian Government lay of yielding to that resistance. Whose influence had been at work in the interval? Is it not clear that it was that of Austria? And so in all times has Austria shown herself, openly or secretly, the enemy of Italian progress. The main object, then, as it appears to me, for the consideration of the Congress is the deprivation of Austria of that exclusive protectorate which she assumes over the Italian States on the right bank of the Po. Let the question of Lombardy be reserved for the future; it is Austria's, on the faith of treaties which Austria knows how well she has herself observed, but there is no reason in the world why Austria should constitute herself the sole arbitrator of the destinies of the Italian States, restrict their Sovereigns to certain forms of Government, and march in her forces whenever the people rise to demand their rights. If Austria has possessions in Italy, and fears the contagion of popular institutions, England, on the contrary, is interested in the establishment of popular Government, and no less than France in the development of industry and commerce. So are the other members of the Congress equally interested in the establishment of social order upon a solid and rational basis, such as cannot be shaken by the despotisms of sovereigns, or the caprice of peoples. Hence there are indisputable reasons why the great Powers of Europe should demand a share in the protectorate of a country so interesting in every point of view; or else that such protectorate should cease forever. This, as it appears to me, is the great point which should be insisted on at the approaching Congress. If so wholesome a principle be established it follows, of course, that all differences between the rulers and their people will be arranged among themselves; or that no military intervention of any Power can take place without the concurrence of all the others.

The Last Confidence Game—The Suicide Dodge.

From the Cincinnati Gazette.

Suicides are becoming so fashionable and exciting so much sympathy, that the confidence men are turning them to account.

On Monday last a well-dressed man stopped at the Phillips House, Dayton, and registered his name, in a handsome hand, as A. V. Lamartine. He represented himself as combining the aristocratic pretensions of two countries—in other words, that he was a relation of the French poet and belonged to the F. F. V.'s.

Shortly after retiring to his room he sent the following note to the landlord:

Phillips House, Room No. 43.

To the Clerk—Dear Sir: I am very unwell and do not expect to recover; will you be so kind and send for a minister to come to my room. I care not of which denomination, so he is a true Christian and a pious man. Yours, respectfully,

A. V. LAMARTINE.

A clergyman and doctor were immediately sent for, and when they entered the room found on the table an empty vial, labeled 2 oz. laudanum, and the following note, which is fully up to the general standard of suicide literature:

Phillips' House, April 18, 1859.

To the Unfeeling World:

Call me not a self-murderer, for it is you that has driven me to this extremity. The public is my murderer, for it has denied me business, and without that I should be cast upon the world—a beggar. God forbid!

Quite out of funds, and no business, what am I to do? To beg? No, I am too spirited. To defraud my fellow man? No, my conscience will not permit me. Death, then, is a welcome expedient.

Yes, let me die and be forgotten. Like poor Byron, "I do not regret what I have done so much as what I might have done." I have been an easy-going, melancholy man—engrossed with books and not with money—"Loving not man the less, but Nature more!"

Virginia is my nativity—Cleveland my adopted home. As my name indicates, I am of French extraction. My family was good, and I tenderly raised. I am an orphan—few relations.

Bury me here, and should I ever have a tomb, let this be my epitaph:

"Far from home, in a land of strangers, he died—preferring death to dishonor."

Broken-hearted Herbert, gallant and immortal Rusk, pathetic McClung, (who sung—"O, Death come soon,") I leave this cold, selfish ball of corruption and depravity, to join you. I have had this in mind for some time.

I have many warm friends, to whom I tender a last and final adieu! I have recommendations from the best of men, to whom I am grateful.

As to death, I am not afraid to die. I never was calmer than now. I could write much more, but I will stop. One word, however—the last I shall ever write—"Agnes!"

ALBERT VICTOR LAMARTINE.

The unhappy young man was nursed, condoled with, and prayed over till he recovered and repented, and then the sympathizing friends, who had been instrumental in rescuing him from self-destruction, kindly contributed $25 to pay his expenses to St. Louis, and he left on the Indianapolis train, with a free pass, just before the arrival of the conductor of the Sandusky train, who informed his benevolent friends that he had only a few days before been found under almost precisely the same circumstances, and that $40 had been raised for him by sympathizing friends there.

The poor fellow is probably now lying at the point of death at Indianapolis, St. Louis, or some other place west, to replenish his purse.

For Havana and New-Orleans.—The steamship Quaker City, Capt. Shufeldt, left yesterday, at 12 o'clock, from her pier, foot of Spring-street, North River, for Havana and New-Orleans. She carried a full freight and 25 passengers. John McLeod Murphy, Esq., Mr. J. Hargous, Mr. Myers, of Tehuantepec, and several others, also took passage in her, to connect with the Company's steamer at New-Orleans, for Minititlan.

The President and his Visitors.—The President having found that it will be impossible for him to discharge his public duties in a satisfactory manner, unless he can devote to them a few hours in each day without interruption, we are therefore authorized to state that he will not receive visitors on any day until 1 o'clock P. M. After that hour he will be happy to see his fellow-citizens as usual.—Constitution.

UNITED STATES CIRCUIT COURT—April 27.

Before Judge Nelson.

Alexander Smith et al. vs. A. and E. J. Higgins.—This case was submitted to the Judge for his decision this morning. The action is in reference to a patent for dyeing yarn with different colors for the warp for carpet weaving, so as to make the warp match the different colors of the pattern. The action was tried last Fall at great length, before a jury, who, however, failed to agree. It was therefore agreed between the parties that the case should be submitted to Judge Nelson on the printed reports of the testimony to be decided by him.

The case was accordingly argued by Mr. Keller and Mr. Blatchford for the complainants, and Mr. Gifford for the defendants.

SUPREME COURT—Special Term—April 27.

Before Justice Sutherland.

William H. Roberts vs. Whitney & Earle.—This is the suit involving the claim set up by Mr. Trimble, the architect, of which we gave the particulars in Wednesday's Times. The cause proceeded, to-day, with the testimony of John M. Trimble, who testified substantially as follows:

I made a general assignment to the plaintiff on Jan. 7, 1857; I took a lease of the ground Nos. 622 and 624 Broadway, from Mr. Meinell, for twenty years and nine months, dated 22d July, 1856; I had several conversations with the defendants before I got the lease; I told them they might have one-third interest each in the lease, if they would advance $10,000 each; they finally agreed to advance the money at 10 per cent. interest, with liberty to take an interest if they chose, and with an assignment of the lease for security. If they decided to take a share they were to pay me $10,000 each in addition to the $10,000 loaned; the assignment was to be a mortgage in effect, for two years and nine months; the defendants asked me to step round to their lawyers, and sign this assignment, which they called a mortgage; I went to the office of Messrs. Van Vorst & Beardslee, and signed it; I did not read it; Mr. Beardslee read it; and I understood it to be a mortgage which I could pay off; the defendants told me so; this assignment was dated 26th July, 1856; afterwards they told me that they did not want to take any share in it; they never paid me the consideration agreed upon for such share; I employed and paid all the workmen, contractors, artists, &c., employed on Laura Keene's Theatre; the defendants recommended a book-keeper to me and I engaged him at $15 per week; in November, 1856, the defendants and this book keeper seized all my desks and papers in my office at No. 622 Broadway, and Whitney said they should keep them; that the building belonged to them, and I should not be there, and they turned me into the street without a dollar; I had got $11,000 from Mr. James of Wall-street; $5,000 from Laura Keene; I put in $1,000 of my own; I told Whitney I feared I should be still $5,000 short; they told me to raise Laura Keene's rent from $12,000 to $15,000, which I did, and they then furnished the $5,000 required; they furnished $15,000 altogether; I think not more; it was not till Nov. 10, 1856, that I knew I had assigned away the property; then the defendants came up and wanted the leases to the tenants made out in their names; Whitney said the title was in them, and he meant to have it; said I, "Where am I?" or, "Who am I?" Whitney said "G—d—n you, you're nowhere;" Earle said "We'll show you who is owner now;" I said "Are you going to swindle me out of my property?" Earle shook his fist at me, and the other swore at me; I had offered to pay them back before this; I could have raised the money.

Cross-examined—I used to raise the money from Mr. James on my own check; I had no accounts at the banks on which I gave checks; Mr. Earle sent down the money to meet them; W. & E. called at the building every day while it was going on; I thought they came there out of friendship—not because they had any interest in the building; I owed Mr. Roberts $300 or $400 when I assigned to him; owed about $15,000 besides debts on the Theatre; everybody thought I had been swindling them for the benefit of the defendants, and all kinds of tricks were played upon me; I received the lease from Mr. Meinell and resigned it to W. & E. all on the same day; it was all done within about two hours.

Warren Leland testified that Whitney told him in July or August, 1856, that he and Earle were going to lend Trimble money to build the theatre.

John Webber testified that he was a step-son of Trimble; that Trimble employed him, as a lawyer, to draw up leases for Laura Keene and other tenants; that Whitney told him to draw them up in his and Earle's names; that witness expressed astonishment at this, and Whitney said Trimble was a d—d fool, and they had got the title and meant to keep it.

Cross-examination—I signed a bond of indemnity to the plaintiff to protect him from any loss in this suit.

A number of witnesses testified that they had been employed by Trimble on the theatre, and had been told by him that Whitney & Earle were his mortgagees.

Some of them testified that they received part of their money from Whitney & Earle, and some that Whitney told them he was only lending Trimble money.

The plaintiff here rested. Mr. Noyes, for the defence, moved to dismiss the complaint, on the ground of variance between it and the case made by the evidence. The motion was denied.

Mr. Meinell, the lessor of the premises, was the first witness called for the defence. He testified that he gave a lease of the premises to Trimble, but supposed that Whitney & Earle were the responsible parties. He always received the rent, $6,000 a year, from them. Trimble never paid any.

R. G. Beardslee testified—I drew up the assignment of the lease, made by Trimble to defendants; I read it over to all parties; Trimble directed me to draw up a full transfer of the lease; he did not want it put in the shape of a mortgage; he said it was to belong to the defendants.

The case is still on. P. G. Cutter and L. S. Chatfield, for plaintiff; W. C. Noyes, and Van Vorst and Beardslee, for defendants.

SUPERIOR COURT—Special Term.

Before Chief Justice Bosworth.

ARREST IN ACTION FOR FALSE RECOMMENDATION OF THIRD PERSON'S CREDIT.

Thomas Smith vs. William A. Corbiere.—The defendant moves to vacate an order holding him to bail. The action is one not arising in contract, the cause of action being the alleged false and fraudulent representation of the defendant as to his means and pecuniary ability of S. A. Parkes & Co., whereby the plaintiff was induced to sell and deliver to the latter goods on credit. By section 179 of the Code, a defendant cannot be held to bail in such a case, unless it be shown by affidavits that he is not a resident of the State, or is about to remove therefrom. Neither of the facts is alleged or pretended. Such a cause of action is not assignable, for the reason that it is a mere personal test—which one for the conversion of personal property is. (Taluskie vs. Smith; 3 Kern, 322.)

The order cannot be sustained under sub. 4 of section 179, which authorizes an arrest where the defendant has been guilty of a fraud in contracting the debt of incurring the obligation, for which the action is brought. That phrase is in substance the same as sub. 4 section 4 of the act to abolish imprisonment for debt passed April 26, 1831, (Laws of 1831, p. 397.) The obligation spoken of is one arising ex contractu, on which an action will lie whether contracted with or without fraud, and the defendant can only be held to bail when he was guilty of a fraud, by reason of his contract in incurring it. It has no relation to a cause of action which arises wholly and exclusively by reason of the fraud of the party, and which must fail if the fraud be not proved. The order must be vacated with $7 costs of this motion, on defendant's stipulating not to bring an action of trespass or false imprisonment by reason of his arrest under said order.

DISMISSAL OF COMPLAINT—ORDER VACATED.

Charles & Wetling vs. The Astor Fire Insurance Company.—According to the affidavits in this case the action was dismissed for want of prosecution on the 11th November, 1857, and notwithstanding such dismissal the plaintiff's attorney gave assurances from time to time thereafter that it was at issue and not tried, assigning sometimes as a reason for not trying it, that it had not been reached; at others that the trial had been postponed by the defendants, and that the falsity of these statements was not ascertained until after the first of February last, when a new attorney was employed to investigate the matter and ascertain what had been done in the cause. That the statute of limitations could be set up as a bar to a new action; none of the allegations are directly contradicted, only it is alleged that in the suit brought Charles alone was plaintiff, and that Wetling was not named as a party. It is not suggested by the defendants' affidavits that they have not at their command all the means of defence and all the evidence to establish it that they ever had; on the contrary the affidavits tend to show, but do not necessarily show, even admitting all they state, that the plaintiffs never had a cause of action.

Under such circumstances, as the plaintiffs' claim is a large one, the order of Nov. 11, 1857, and all subsequent proceedings founded thereon, may be set aside and a complaint may be served in the action named on the summons on the defendants within 20 days, on payment of the costs adjusted in favor of the defendants, or such part of them as remain unpaid, and $7 costs of opposing this motion. If these conditions be not complied with, the motion is denied, with $7 costs.

Phelps vs. Warg, Executor, et al. Owen et al vs. The Hudson River Railroad Company.—Cases settled and papers with the Special Term Clerk.

The Suit Relative to Laura Keene's Theatre.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

The report of this case in your paper, yesterday, is signally inaccurate. Mr. Trimble took a lease from Mr. Meinel for the land on which Laura Keene's Theatre is built. Mr. T., in order to procure a loan of $20,000 of the defendants, executed an assignment of his lease. Trimble then went on to build the theatre, which cost him nearly $50,000, all of which was paid by him, with his own money and his own credit, except about $14,000 advanced by Whitney & Earle.

The speculation proving profitable, Whitney & Earle took possession of the Theatre, and have since claimed to hold it under the assignment. This action is to compel the defendants to surrender possession, to render an account of rents and profits, and pay Trimble the balance, if in his favor; if not, to take pay of the balance due to them, if any, and then surrender the Theatre. Trimble tendered Whitney & Earle $36,000, more than two years ago, which they declined to accept. On the whole, so far as the trial has gone, Mr. Trimble seems to be clearly in the right. The present rent of the Theatre is $23,000 per annum.

Wednesday, April 27—P. M.

The rain-storm has made the day rather a dull one in Wall-street. The Money Market is without variation in rates or demand, and after the Europa's mail closed there was no business in Exchange. The terms left off 109⅞@110⅛ on London. The steamer took $532,244 in Specie, including $100,000 in Gold Coin not reported in the engagements yesterday afternoon. The later accounts from Europe by telegraph from St. Johns are scarcely referred to on the Stock Exchange. The political situation of affairs and the price of the French and English Funds are not perceptibly different from the advices by the City of Washington. The explanations in the British Parliament on the Continental difficulty was postponed to the evening of Monday, 18th inst., the day the present Galway steamer sailed. The Customs to-day are $114,000. The net disbursements of the Sub-Treasury are $76,000 short of this sum, so that the balance this afternoon is $6,778,981.

There was a good deal done on the Stock Exchange, the staple of the business being New-York Central stock, about 9,000 shares between the cash figures 72⅛@71⅞ ₩ cent., a decline of ½ ₩ cent. from the last quoted prices of yesterday. Some seller options were put out at 71¾@71⅛ ₩ cent. There was increased depression in Erie shares, and the price fell below the extreme panic sales of 1857, say $7 on the printed list this afternoon, and $6⅝ subsequently on the Street. The bids for the common bonds and fourth mortgages of the Company were also quite heavy. Nothing new in the affairs of the road has transpired this week. There was also increased depression in Michigan Southern, both Guaranteed and Common shares. The transfers reopen to-morrow, after the reëlection of the old Board of management, which took place at Toledo, to-day, without opposition. The Guaranteed stock was offered at the close at 34 ₩ cent. Michigan Central keeps firm and Galena is fairly supported on the cash stock though done at lower figures on sellers' options. The Bull movement in Chicago and Rock Island holds on, and the transactions, to-day, were again large, cash and down to seller 30 days, the price closing 59¼ ₩ cent. The price of Pacific Mail shares left off 87½ ₩ cent. cash, while the Bear account offered 60-day options as low as 85 ₩ cent. The deliveries the next few days on March contracts below 80 ₩ cent. are understood to be considerable, and the efforts to draw out the cash certificates are, of course, quite marked, especially as bona fide holders have grown somewhat indifferent, on the eve of another half-yearly dividend, to the Vanderbilt competition. The shares of the Panama Company were again firm, and Reading steady. In State Stocks the changes are not important. Government Fives of 1874 sold at 104¼ ₩ cent., and 1865 at 102½ ₩ cent. Some of the leading City capitalists, retired from active business, have been taking the New Stock by way of placing part of their income beyond the heavy taxation of 1¾ ₩ cent. There is neither State nor City authority to impose a tax for any purpose upon the stocks of the United States. The general market left off, this afternoon, irregular in tone upon most of the speculative shares. It would seem as though neither party felt entirely sure of their ground on more than one or two stocks at a time.

The circular of Messrs. Wright & Co. remarks:

"The disappointing news brought per Arabia has had an adverse influence throughout the whole of the Cotton markets of the country. The advices from this side, connected with the small stock held in Liverpool, were confidently calculated upon to produce a favorable effect there, and not until the Arabia arrived has this anticipation been modified. It is now generally supposed that for the time political matters will override present influences from this side, and the consequence has been that in the Upland markets, where the receipts are most copious, owing to the transfer of stocks from the interior towns, the decline has been ¼c.@⅜c. ₩ lb., and business is almost at a stand. Receipts for the week, 48,000 bales, against 71,000 bales last year, and 75,000 in 1856. The excess, compared with last year, is now reduced to 763,000 bales. A more rapid reduction may be looked for next month, as the interior stocks are being exhausted and the receipts in May last year were rather large for the season.

The Ohio Life Insurance and Trust Company.

The Cincinnati Enquirer of the 26th states that an amended and supplemental bill was filed, on the 16th inst., by Henry Stanbery and N. C. McLean, Esqs., in the United States Circuit Court, in the case of James C. C. Bell et al. vs. The Ohio Life Insurance and Trust Company. The allegations are as follows:

1. That the plaintiffs strike out the names of Rose, Boyard, George S. Coe, J. B. Hosmer, and Samuel E. Foster, as parties defendant.

2. In place of a certain allegation in the bill of assignment, the plaintiffs substitute the following: That the assignees, with the possession of the assets, took upon themselves the duties of the assignment, and continued to act as assignees until the close of January last, when the further administration of the assets and of the trusts under assignment was, by the desire of the Superior Court of Cincinnati, transferred to Charles Reemelin and James P. Kilbreath, who took upon themselves the duties incident to the assignment, and received from the assignees the possession of the assets. The plaintiffs state that no dividend has as yet been declared by the six original assignees, or by Reemelin and Kilbreath, out of the assets or the proceeds thereof; and the plaintiffs are informed and so allege that, after paying costs, expenses and charges, the dividend payable to the creditors of the Trust Company will be very small, and will not probably exceed one-fourth of the amount of its debts. The plaintiffs further state that the trustees ought to be held liable to the said plaintiffs and other creditors for the large loss so sustained by their negligence and mismanagement, and ought to be held responsible and indemnify the plaintiffs and the other creditors for the damages and injury arising therefrom.

3. In place of another passage in the bill, the plaintiffs make this amendment: The plaintiffs pray for process of subpœna against the defendants, Charles Stetson, Abraham Taylor, John C. Wright, Samuel J. Broadwell, George Crawford, Nathaniel Wright, Samuel B. Keys, George T. Stedman, Charles G. Envart, Samuel C. Parkhurst, Samuel Fosdick, George Luckey, Clement Dietrich and Samuel Forrer, all of whom are citizens of Ohio and residents of this District.

4. And the plaintiffs omit and strike out from the original bill certain passages, and substitute therefor the following: And the plaintiffs pray that the amendatory and supplemental matter be annexed to and made part of the original bill.

The case will be tried some time during the present April term.
